HONOUR THEM

Campaign to award George Cross to Dover for outstanding bravery in WWII

EXCLUSIVE

By PHIL REILLY

A CAMPAIGN has been launched to award the George Cross to Dover for its residents' courage in World World Two.

Its supporters are calling on the Government to give the town the medal, which is the highest civilian honour for bravery.

The Lord Mayor of London first mooted the idea in September 1944.

Campaigners are preparing their strategy and intend to make the case to Prime Minister Gordon Brown, Mayor of London Ken Livingstone, the Ministry of Defence and the Ceremonial Secretariat, which makes recommendations to the Government on awarding medals.

This week, Labour deputy leader Harriet Harman said she would meet with Dover MP Gwyn Prosser, who is supporting the campaign, to discuss it in the near future.

She told Kent on Sunday: "People remember the Blitz in London, but are perhaps not so aware of what Dover went through. I will meet up with Gwyn Prosser to hear any suggestions that he has."

Although the honour is usually reserved for individuals, the island of Malta and the Royal Ulster Constabulary have previously received the award.

Dover became known as Hellfire Corner during the conflict, and was the only town in Britain to suffer constant bombardment between 1940 and 1944.

Just 22 miles from Cap Gris Nez in France, it was the only part of the UK to be within range-based Nazi artillery.

More than 200 civilians died and over 10,000 of the town's buildings were damaged by bombing and shelling.

Campaigner Marilyn Stephenson-Knight, who is also the researcher behind the successful Dover War Memorial Project, said: "In late 1944, the Mayor of Dover received many letters of congratulations, many of which said the town deserved the George Cross.

Target

"The town was a special target, not just because of the shelling and bombing, but Luftwaffe pilots carried out a lot of strafing too, where they literally swooped down on the streets, firing machine guns at civilians.

"Dover was also a training ground for a lot of their pilots who were coming over to shoot down the barrage balloons, and was also used as a decoy ahead of the D-Day landings.

"We feel the civilians are the real unsung heroes in all of this. They served and died just as much as anyone."

Fellow campaigner Chris Precious added:

'Every day they faced air raids and shelling'

"People have felt for many, many years that Dover deserved the award, and with a new Prime Minister in office we felt this was perhaps the right time to make the case."

In 1944, the Lord Mayor of London Sir Frank Alexander stated in a letter that Dover should receive the award.

He wrote: "The City of London sends its heartfelt congratulations to the citizens of Dover on the cessation of the devastating and unceasing attacks.

"The world now realises all that your people and sister coast towns have suffered over the years and the courage of your people."

The bombardment started on August 12, 1940 and finished on September 26, 1944.

Mr Prosser told Kent on Sunday the town had "an exceptional case".

He said: "The people of Dover were at the brunt of all the attacks. Without any fuss they stoically lived through those difficult times.

"Here they were, literally on the front line, with air raids just about every day, as well as constant shelling from across the Channel.

"Our own Battle of Britain was staged over these shores, which is why we have the memorial situated within the district at Capel-le-Ferne.

"It is very much a matter of recognising the everyday people of Dover that lived their lives during those times.

"The George Cross is usually for individuals, but there have been two exceptions made in the past. We mustn't let that put us off as Dover has an exceptional case."

KOS delivers again

New midweek papers and websites launched

By PETER BOYES
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

EIGHT new free papers and websites have been successfully launched across the county.

KOS Media, publisher of Kent on Sunday, www.kentnews.co.uk and the Saturday Observer, is behind the new launch.

The new papers are called: yourthanet, yourcanterbury, yourmaidstone, yourswale, yourshepway, yourdover, yourashford and yourmedway.

KOS distribution teams, dressed in blue T-shirts with the names of the new products, helped distribute the papers around the towns of Kent and gave members of the public all the details about the launches.

The all-colour first editions were packed with news, views, sports, interviews, competitions, puzzles, and entertainment, travel, motoring jobs, property and shopping features.

The new websites, which have the same name as the papers with .co.uk, will updated seven days a week with the latest news and sports stories.

KOS Media managing director Paul Stannard said: "We've produced 600 pages for eight new papers and eight new websites.

"We have had emails from the public and advertisers to say congratulations. We are getting blown away by the reaction on the streets and our phones are going wild."

A KOS spokesman said hundreds of outlets ran out of editions and had to be restocked with the first 12 hours.

One newsagent in Thanet said it was already having a positive impact on his business, with extra customers coming in on Wednesday. He has increased his supply from 200 to 500 copies to cope with demand.

ROADRUNNERS: Yourpaper delivery team hit the county's streets on Wednesday

More than 60,000 E-editions of the new papers, featuring our pioneering page-turning software, were sent out this week to readers' in-boxes.

The launch came as KOS Media, an independent Kent company, celebrated five years since the birth of Kent on Sunday.

The paper has taken the county by storm and won numerous industry awards in that time.

From a staff of 15 in 2003, the company now employs around close to 200 full and part-time workers.

The latest launch attracted interest from both the regional and national media.

Our new TV broadcasting service, called yourkenttv.co.uk, had a 'soft launch' this week with a selection of some of the new films and features on the site. The full launch of all the services in our virtual online community will be rolled out in the coming weeks.

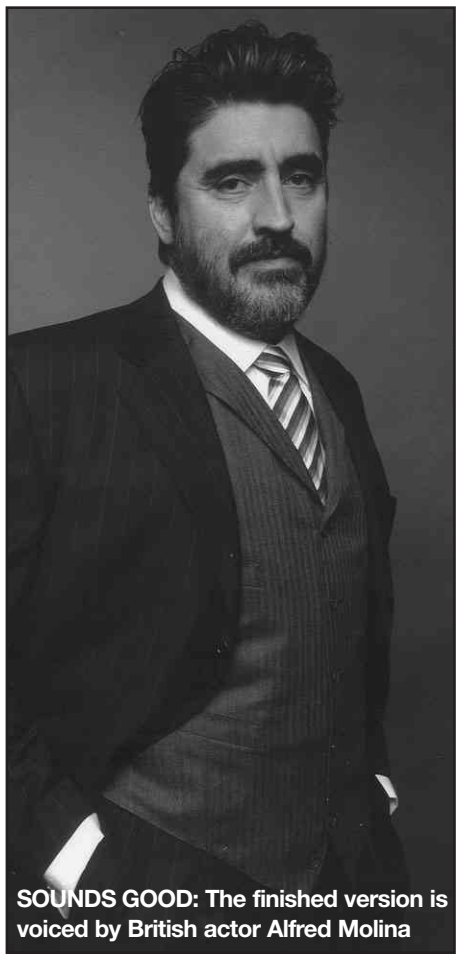

KOS Media is running a competition for the best video clip submitted by the public with the winner receiving £500. To enter, upload your clip onto our site by following the easy-to-use instructions on the site. Standard terms and conditions apply.

SOUNDS GOOD: The finished version is voiced by British actor Alfred Molina

NEW CHAPTER: David Hewson

Thriller fiction is music to our ears

The novelist David Hewson is one of 17 writers to add to internet audio story, The Chopin Manuscript

By PHIL REILLY
phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

A WRITER from Kent has taken part in a unique project bringing together a host of top name thriller writers from across the world.

David Hewson, who lives near the village of Wye outside Ashford, has contributed a chapter to The Chopin Manuscript, a serial thriller which will be the first of its kind to be published week by week in audio format over the internet.

Each of the 17 renowned writers, including Jeffery Deaver, Lee Childs, John Ramsey Miller and Erica Spindler, has written a chapter, with each challenging the next to move the story on in interesting and unexpected ways.

The finished version is voiced by British character actor Alfred Molina, whose recent films include Spiderman 2 and The Da Vinci Code.

Dickens

Mr Hewson, who played an instrumental role in last year's Save Wye campaign which prevented thousands of houses being built in and around the village, wrote the second chapter, which he described as "an incredible experience".

He said: "People have written serial books before, but nobody's ever done it as audio. Most Charles Dickens books were written as weekly instalments. In fact, when they turned up in America people would queue up by the ships to get hold of them.

"I agreed to do it about a year ago, and in February I received an email with the first chapter by Jeffery Deaver.

"I actually wrote my chapter in just three days, and it was quite liberating because I usually need to have an idea of where the story is going to end up. The good thing this time was all the balls I threw in the air, I didn't have to catch.

"I had to pick a number of themes from Jeffery's chapter, which was set in Warsaw, and it was clear to me that music was key to it.

"What interested me was the idea that you could put some kind of a secret inside a piece of music.

"I created a character called Felicia Kaminski, who is a 19-year-old Polish refugee who plays the violin, and Jeffery has since said she is his favourite character in the book."

With so many high profile writers involved, Mr Hewson admitted there was a certain amount of competition.

He continued: "There was certainly a bit of one-upmanship involved. People were putting their own twists and conundrums in and saying 'how the hell are you going to get out of that?'

"It was all healthy though, it was part of the challenge of writing it in this way."

He was also full of praise for Alfred Molina's performance throughout.

He added: "He has the most incredible voice, he has just done an amazing job. He does all the accents, and the amount of skill that goes into it is astounding."

The first two chapters of The Chopin Manuscript will be available to listen to or download at the website www.audible.com on September 25, with a further chapter released week by week from then on.

The complete version will be available in November, to be followed by a print version, although no release date has been given yet.

Decision on Post Offices is delayed

THE announcement of which Post Offices in Kent face closure has been delayed until early next month.

The Government plans to close 2,500 branches by the end of next year, with 59 in Kent thought to be facing the chop.

Post Office Ltd was expected to name the branches on Monday, sparking a six-week public consultation period, but Kent on Sunday now understands that will not happen until on or shortly after October 1.

Sean Carter, rural retail consultant for Action with Communities in Rural Kent, said the delay would leave post masters and communities "on tenterhooks".

He said: "There's been a lot of uncertainty for a long time now, and it is getting ridiculous.

"The longer this goes on for, the more difficult it is for post masters and communities."

Kent County Council leader Paul Carter last week launched a campaign to prevent closures with the message "use it or lose it".

Sean Carter added that even if individual branches were to be saved, another in the county would close in its place.

He added: "Although there are some that have a very good case to stay open, the number is fixed.

"Those cases can only be made during the consultation process."

THE Queen is set to make her first formal visit to Kent in more than two years when she comes to Brompton Barracks in Chatham next month.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II will be touring the barracks on October 15 in her role as Commander in Chief of the Royal Engineers.

The last time she visited the county was in July 2005, when she opened a new ferry berth at the Port of Dover and went to see the Bronze Age boat exhibited in the town's museum.

She last came to Chatham in 2002 to open the Universities at Medway campus, and last visited the barracks in 1987.

No details of the visit have been announced yet, but it is likely she will be greeted by a guard of honour.

It is also expected she will dine in the Officer's Mess, before being given a tour of the site's state-of-the-art engineering training facilities and its renowned minesweeping training school.

Increase in female sexual offenders

Figures reveal rise as paedophile gang, which included a woman, is jailed for abusing children

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

THE number of women charged with sex offences has risen dramatically in recent years, according to new figures.

Kent Police charged 40 per cent more women in relation to sex crimes in 2006-07 than in 2005-06.

The figures came as Monica McCanch was jailed for six years this week for her role in a paedophile gang that abused two children aged 12 and 13 during a six-hour orgy at a house in Fleet, Hampshire in 2005.

Church-going McCanch pleaded guilty to five offences including four counts of sexual activity with a child and engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a child.

Rape

In court she blamed her role in the crimes on the traumatic experiences she had suffered in her 20s, including sexual and physical abuse. The retired 55-year-old was living in Jamaica but was formerly of Ash in Kent.

Also sentenced at Maidstone Crown Court this week was Steven Horton, 44, from Sittingbourne, who received an indeterminate prison sentence for 28 offences including rape of a child and making and distributing indecent images of children.

And Archibald Wood, 60, from Tavistock

PAEDOPHILE: Monica McCanch, 55

in Devon, was jailed for seven years for nine crimes including causing a child under 13 to engage in sexual activity.

They were caught in Operation Starlight, one of Kent police's biggest investigations into the sexual abuse of children.

New figures released by Kent Police show a rise in the number of women involved in sex offences. From April 2005 and March 2006, 10 women were charged and two cautioned for sexual offences.

From April 2006 to March 2007, 14 women were charged and eight cautioned for sexual offences.

Detective Constable Judy Gent is one of the investigating officers in Operation Starlight. She said the increase was due to a combination of changing attitudes and people reporting more crimes.

"Victims are more confident and as police we are doing our utmost to prosecute people. I think there is this realisation that the stereotype of women being nurturing carers is changing. It is not always men that are sex offenders," she said.

McCanch was only the second female offender she had investigated.

While working in Maidstone a decade ago she was investigating a husband and wife who had sexually abused a child – the woman was charged but found not guilty. The man was jailed for more than a year and put on the sex offenders' register.

"Members of the public find it very difficult to get their heads around the fact that a female can sexually abuse and that is the big problem. We tend to close our eyes to the fact," she said.

The jailing of McCanch shows attitudes are changing. She said: "People are realising there are female sex offenders out there. But it is still something fairly sensational for the public to take on board."

Kent Police said more arrests are likely in Operation Starlight which is now investigating the international distribution of images of child abuse on the internet.

CHRIS Langham has been jailed for 10 months for downloading child porn.

The 58-year-old wept as he was sentenced at Maidstone Crown Court on Friday.

Some of the videos downloaded from the internet by the Bafta-winning comedy actor were level five – the worst and most sadistic category of pornography.

They included titles of Bondage 11-year-old, Incest and Philippine Child Prostitute.

Langham, of Golford, near Cranbook, was convicted of 15 offences involving indecent images of children in August.

He admitted watching the videos but pleaded not guilty because he did not want to be labelled a paedophile.

His family home was raided in November 2005 and he was arrested after police found images and video clips on a computer, a laptop and an external hard drive.

The images that the 58-year-old had collected mainly featured young girls and all appeared to be pre-pubescent, police said.

Two of the level five videos featured an eight-year-old girl being sadistically abused by her father.

She has since been identified and rescued from the abuse and her father is being prosecuted, officers said.

Langham, a married father-of-three, denied being sexually interested in children and claimed he had downloaded the images for research purposes.

Langham will serve five months of his sentence, less the 43 days he has already spent in custody, the judge said.

Headstone at last for pauper Spurs founder

THE founder of Tottenham Hotspur Football Club, who died a pauper in Dover, is to have a headstone unveiled at his previously unmarked grave.

Rev John Ripsher, a vicar who founded the club in 1882 as a means of keeping local youngsters off the streets, is currently buried in the town's Charlton Cemetery after dying in the workhouse that later became Buckland Hospital.

His whereabouts were uncovered by author Peter Lupson while researching the origins of major teams for his book Thank God for Football.

A ceremony will take place on Monday, September 24, at 2pm at the cemetery to unveil the new headstone, which has been paid for by the Spur's Supporters Club.

Descendents of Rev Ripsher have been invited to attend, and two of the club's directors are also expected to attend.

Relatives of the first black professional footballer Walter Tull, who played for Tottenham and lived in Dover, are also expected to be there.

As well as founding the club, Rev Ripsher became its first chairman. He left the club in the 1890s, and later moved to Dover, where his sister ran the Diamond Hotel.

The details of his later life are unclear, but it is understood that he ended up living in the workhouse.

He died with no money and was buried in the pauper's grave, with only a number to mark it.

Town councillor Paul Verrill, a close friend of Mr Lupson's, said he wanted Tottenham fans to come along to the unveiling.

He said: "It is incredible to think this man founded one of the biggest football clubs in the country, if not the world, and yet until now there hasn't been so much as a headstone to mark his grave."

Conserving our historic Cutty Sark

The clipper was damaged by fire in May. Luckily, its fabric had already been moved to Chatham for work. HUW POWELL reports on the project

I HAD expected sun-filled workshops with craftsmen lovingly painting the famous figurehead of the young and beautiful witch called Nannie, or people polishing up the ship's brass bell until it gleamed.

So when I arrived to visit the Cutty Sark project in Chatham Dockyard there was a real surprise in store. I found the parts of the 137-year-old tea clipper lying in the open, and the skilled work being done by a young and dedicated team.

The workshop is a small lockup container, doubling as a tea hut, and it is all wedged in a corner of the famous ex-Royal Navy shipyard just yards from the sea wall.

Heritage

Ian Bell, the conservation technical manager, said the Cutty Sark project is fulfilling its original Heritage Lottery funding application. Not only is the fabric of the Cutty Sark to be conserved as far as possible, but the project plans to become a centre of excellence and education for conservation skills.

The project, underway before the fire, will involve as many local people as possible. Young people from disadvantaged backgrounds and ex-offenders are among the workforce. "We want to fill a vacuum that can be continued long after the Cutty Sark project is finished," said Mr Bell.

Brought up in Kent, the 39-year-old grew up with boats. A rigger by trade, he first worked as a fisherman from Dover, then moved to traditional oyster smack restoration at Faversham. Later he became closely involved with the replica sailing ship Discovery.

"I have seen people who have had their lives turned around," he said proudly. "The experience of working on such a fabulous ship is something they will take pride from for the rest of their lives."

BACK TO LIFE: The clipper's fabric at Chatham Dockyard; and technical manager Ian Bell

The Cutty Sark was launched in 1870, and cost £10,000 to build. She was the pinnacle of commercial sailing ship construction; 280 feet long and 36 feet wide, her designer Hercules Linton, gave her an expected life span of less than 25 years.

Made for a hard commercial working life there was a lack of finesse in the overall finish. "She was built by big blokes using big bits of wood," said Mr Bell.

Her beauty comes from the graceful form that evolved from her sole function, to be the fastest commercial sailing ship in the world.

The tea trade she took part in was the most lucrative cargo of the time, and on the Cutty Sark's first trip from Shanghai, the tea she carried was valued at £100,000 when it arrived in London; ten times the cost of her original construction.

Mr Bell said that she was a racing ship, roughly built and working as close to the point of structural failure that the builders could get away with.

Many of the valuable and more fragile items that have survived the fire in May are in storage in Greenwich in a stable environment. Conservation work at Chatham Dockyard involves among other things, the masts, rigging, deckhouses and hull planking, all quite able to lead an outdoor life.

Mr Bell said these are parts made to endure hostile environments, so a damp English summer holds little threat. He added that from the deck upwards the Cutty Sark could go sailing tomorrow.

But the overall aim of the project is conservation, not restoration. Because 97 per cent of the original hull remains, unlike those of other famous historic ships such as HMS Victory in Portsmouth where only two per cent of the old warhorse is original, the emphasis is to conserve for future generations.

The idea that she could ever sail again is not in the equation. Although a distant possibility, the work needed to achieve modern safety standards would destroy far too much of the original fabric.

It would also result in only a privileged few being able to enjoy her unique atmosphere, so conservation is the primary objective which will allow access to as many people as possible in the coming years.

Before leaving the site, I walk alone around the items laid out on the ancient dockyard ground; the windlass and anchor, wire rigging, huge blocks, piles of teak planking, her masts and spars, all of it waiting for tender, loving care from the conservation team.

It suddenly seems quite correct for it to be in the open and without rustic theme park frills. This is how the Cutty Sark was originally constructed: in a rough dockyard by hardy and skilled men. This is how a working shipyard would have looked, not a museum of brown-coated technicians, but a gritty and physical environment.

If the builders from 140 years ago could visit, they would feel quite at home in Chatham Dockyard. They would know that their beautiful and proud Cutty Sark is in safe hands and getting ready for her next great adventure.

SOUGHT: Keith Prest; and Louise Evans, who was killed outside her place of work this week

Police seek ex-partner of murdered prison tutor

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

DETECTIVES have identified a man they want to speak to about the murder of a female teacher in the grounds of an open prison.

Keith Prest, 48, is a former boyfriend of literacy tutor Louise Evans whose body was found in the car park of East Sutton Park open prison near Maidstone.

Her throat was cut and she was found dead slumped behind her car by a prison officer.

Police urged people not to approach Mr Prest and said he could be a danger to others or himself.

Superintendent Steve Corbishly said: "We urgently need to talk to Mr Prest and would appeal to him to contact us."

Mr Prest, who is unemployed and of no fixed address, met Ms Evans about 18 months ago, police said.

He is described as white, of slim build and 6ft 2ins tall. Police urged people to dial 999 if they saw him.

Ms Evans, 48, lived in Hothfield near Ashford and was a single mother of two daughters aged 24 and 27.

She had left the jail at 4pm after teaching inmates and her body was found at 5.15pm on Wednesday.

In a statement, her daughters said: "We are devastated by what has happened. She wasn't just our mum; she was our friend and a loving sister.

"We hope that the person responsible is brought to justice."

A prison source said: "Louise loved her job and this has come as a massive shock to everyone who works at the prison and everyone who knows her."

Ms Evans was employed by private contractor A4e on the Offender Learning and Skills Service.

Members of the public use the car park when visiting the jail, which has a good relationship with the local community.

The prison holds about 100 adult and young women offenders in open conditions preparing them for resettlement back into the community.

If you have any information call the incident room on 01622 654 857 or Kent Crimestoppers anonymously 0800 555 111.

Fans rush for Led Zep lottery tickets

MORE than 20 million people have applied for tickets for the Led Zeppelin comeback concert later this year.

The heavy metal legends, whose bassist John Paul Jones, 61, hails from Kent, are to play their first show since 1985's Live Aid concert at the O2 arena on November 26.

The tickets will be allocated through a lottery system, with fans having until midday on Monday to register.

The massive demand, equivalent to 80,000 people per minute, crashed the venue's computer system, despite the £125 ticket price.

The show will accompany the release of a 24-track greatest hits album, Mothership, which is out on November 11.

KENTISH maid and Hollywood star Naomi Watts has been raving about the joys of motherhood.

Miss Watts, who was raised in Shoreham, said: "I'm thinking about when's the next feeding, when I can catch up on sleep and when do I file his nails so he doesn't scratch himself.

"That's my life right now, and I love it. But I know I'll want to get back into my work, because I love it and it excites me."

GGF recommendations state that all conservatories should be erected in accordance with proposed BS 6399. This ensures that all roofs are structurally correct and strong enough to withstand today's volatile snow and wind loadings.

Computer software now exists to provide the correct structural roof for your conservatory based on your individual post code and the snow and wind loadings for your location.
The software also proves that the majority of standard roofs DO NOT COMPLY.

Fineline manufacture and install Tricept Conservatories which use Heavy Duty roof and frame sections that far exceed these requirements... and we are happy to prove it!

Killers may have been given UK citizenship

THE Government has no idea how many murderers, rapists and child molesters have been granted British citizenship in the last decade.

The Home Office was also unable to say how many religious extremists, drug dealers, racists and fraudsters had been granted citizenship since 1997.

Conservative immigration spokesman Damian Green asked the Home Office to provide statistics in a parliamentary question.

Home Office minister Liam Byrne told him: "It would only be possible to answer these questions by reference to the individual files, which would involve disproportionate cost."

Mr Green told KOS Media: "I'm appalled. It beggars belief that the Home Office doesn't know if murderers, rapists, child molesters and drug dealers have been granted British citizenship in the past 10 years.

"Are ministers so dubious about their own systems that they cannot check this? And if they really don't know, what are they doing about it?"

Famous car flies in to museum

THE flying car from the film Chitty Chitty Bang Bang, based on a novel by Kent author Ian Fleming, will be on public display until the end of this year.

The magical vehicle, reputed to have been inspired by a car owned by the eccentric Count Zborowski, who lived in Higham Park near Canterbury, is on show at Beaulieu National Motor Museum in Hampshire.

James Bond creator Fleming, who lived at St Margaret's Bay, wrote Chitty Chitty Bang Bang in 1964, and it was released as a film four years later.

Political commentator Christopher Hitchens talks to KoS about

Hitchens: David Cameron is phony

CHRISTOPHER Hitchens has one of the most thought-provoking voices in the English-speaking world.

The British journalist and author, who has lived in Washington DC for the last 25 years, is an atheist and anti-monarchist who maintains his connection to the Labour Party – yet has been dubbed a neoconservative by his critics.

But the 58-year-old certainly has no affection for the Conservative Party.

In an interview with KOS Media during a visit to the county, Hitchens laughed off Tory leader David Cameron's chances at the next general election.

And he dismissed claims that Prime Minister Gordon Brown had exhibited "Stalinist tendencies".

In a wide-ranging interview, he insisted that Coalition soldiers were right to invade Iraq, but said the British pull-out from Basra Palace was an "admission of defeat."

Hitchens was in the county to talk about war – albeit one that occurred towards the start of the last century and the effect it had on a great British writer.

He was a keynote speaker at an international conference on Rudyard Kipling at the University of Kent last week.

By JAMIE McGINNES
jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

Hitchens has written several times about Kipling, whom he said he has been interested in all his life.

There is growing interest in Kipling's role in the Great War as a patriotic writer and the impact the death of his son Jack during the Battle of Loos in 1915 had on the author. It is the subject of a feature film starring Daniel Radcliffe being released this autumn.

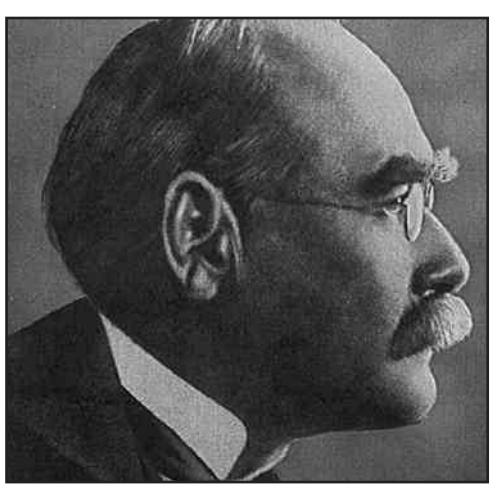

Jack's body was never found in his father's lifetime – a fact that drove Kipling mad, according to Hitchens. Jack's poor eyesight meant he could have skipped military service, but Kipling used his influence to get him a commission.

Hitchens went to northern France a few years ago to write about the poignant discovery of Jack's body – and the impact his death had on Kipling.

"[The effect was] I think to drive him slightly mad actually," said Hitchens.

"He felt guilty. The boy was myopic and could easily have been forgiven for not signing up with the Army. He didn't last more than a couple of days.

"I think he may have felt bad about that anyway but the thing that I think would work on anyone's mind was that he was never found.

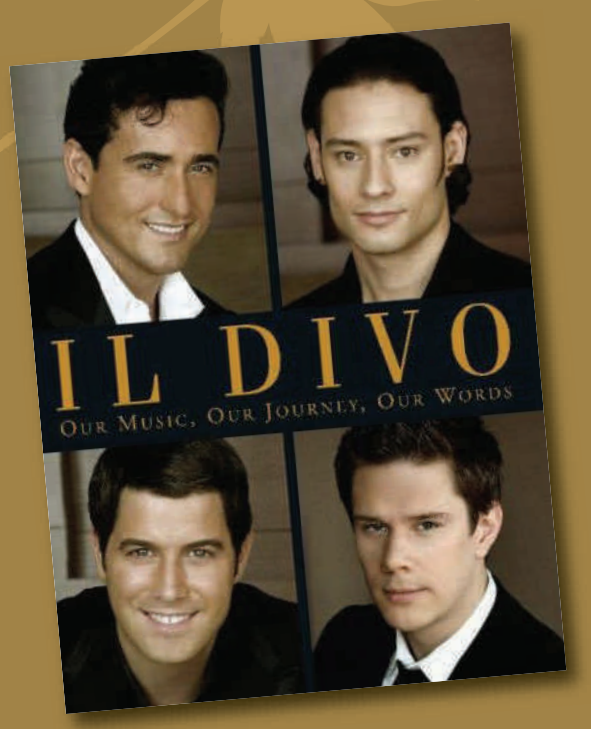

PATRIOTIC: Rudyard Kipling hated Germans

"He went missing and Kipling kept on hoping he would turn up as a prisoner but he never did. I think some of the fanaticism that came to him in the way Kipling went on to write about the Germans – his death contributed to that."

Rather than make him less patriotic, his son's death made Kipling even more fervent his views on war and the Conservatives

WARMONGER: Christopher Hitchins was a keynote speaker at the University of Kent in his writings about Britain's World War One enemies.

"He became much more jingoistic and patriotic actually," said Hitchens.

"It didn't in the least bit turn him against war. It multiplied his detestation of all things Teutonic."

Hitchens follows Kipling's lead in his unflinching support for today's most significant war – the US-led invasion of Iraq.

He said that leaving Saddam Hussein be was more dangerous than invading.

When asked how damaging the war in Iraq has been for Britain, Hitchens said: "I don't think that at all myself, I mean not as damaging as abstention from it would have been."

He added: "It wasn't done with all the skill and deftness that one might have wanted, but I think it was inevitable. As well as necessary I think it was just."

Similarly, the manner of Britain's departure from Basra Palace could have been handled better, said Hitchens. "It looks to me something like an admission of defeat."

Although some would identify Hitchens' support for the Iraq war as a sign of his neo-conservatism, he insists his views are closer to the left.

He rejects comparisons between Gordon Brown and Stalin.

"I do know a lot of people in the Labour Party and I still consider myself a member of it," said Hitchens. "If anything I hear he's too willing to compromise and borrow talent from other parties."

And he is damning in his assessment of Mr Brown's opposition in Parliament.

"I can't believe that mediocrity like David Cameron can be considered as Prime Minister for 10 seconds by anybody," he said.

"Part of that is a general loathing for the Tory Party and the feeling that it's not fit to govern in any way. Quite apart from that I just think Cameron is such a transparent phony that it's beyond caricature."

Hitchens has had a number of public fallings out with his brother, the Mail on Sunday columnist Peter Hitchens.

In many ways, Peter Hitchens, 55, appears his brother's philosophical opposite. He is traditionalist, Conservative and an Anglican churchgoer.

But Christopher Hitchens says their differences have been blown out of proportion.

"Peter and I – you'll find this is true in quite a lot of families – haven't, even when we were small, been particularly close.

"We haven't been to the same schools, we haven't followed the same careers in the same way, haven't lived in the same town for decades.

"It's just one of those things. I think you'll find lots of people have brothers they don't particularly see."

However, and perhaps tellingly, the last time he saw his brother was on Question Time in Colchester in June.

"We don't have that many occasions to cross paths," he added.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR RUBBISH

You wouldn't use an unlicensed taxi.

So why use an unlicensed waste remover?

The law now states that if you have any of your rubbish removed and it ends up being flytipped, you could be held responsible and fined. When dealing with waste removal services or tradesmen where rubbish will be generated, like builders, plumbers, gardening contractors, always ask them for a valid waste carriers licence.

Follow these 3 simple steps to help protect yourself and the environment.

HOW TO CHECK

1. Ask the waste removal service/tradesman for their waste carrier licence number.
2. Check their waste carrier licence number or their company name by visiting the Clean Kent website: www.cleankent.com and following the link to the Environment Agency or call 0870 850 6506.
3. Please keep a note of all the information you receive from the waste removal service/tradesman and a receipt for any work done. If they're not registered don't use them. Inform Clean Kent of the rogue trader immediately by calling 0845 345 0210.

Don't forget if you see someone flytipping call the Clean Kent hotline on 0845 345 0210. All calls are confidential.

Cricket memories to the fore as the life of one of the game's

Blowers is 100 not out

By PHIL REILLY
phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

FOR decades the rich voice of Henry 'Blowers' Blofeld has been comforting Radio Four listeners through any number of England cricketing collapses, but speaking to KOS Media this week it seemed he could do with some words of comfort himself.

"I'm terribly sorry, but I'm not having the best of days," he explained with the same hint of disappointment in his voice that Test Match Special listeners will recognise from particularly poor England performances. "The bloody car's in trouble. Brake lining's gone. But don't worry, I'm sure I'll have it fixed by the time I have to drive to Tunbridge Wells."

The 67-year-old known as 'the voice of cricket' is heading to the town's Assembly Rooms Theatre on October 25 to perform his one man show An Evening With Blowers, in which he regales the audience with tales from his long and chequered life both in and out of the commentary box.

His tone quickly brightened as he explained that the show was not about cricket, but rather the many stories and characters he has encountered.

Among the many colourful and famous people he has considered friends over the years is Kent novelist Ian Fleming, creator of James Bond, whom he insisted pinched his surname for 007's arch nemesis Ernst Blofeld.

"Ian and my father were great friends and I came to know him very well – they belonged to the same club.

"Ian also introduced me to Noel Coward, who of course sold him his house in St Margaret's Bay.

"They were both awfully nice men, but I do have some very funny stories to tell. Unfortunately, if I told you them now no-one would come to my show."

Erotic poetry

Other famous names that find their way into the show are his good pal Clive Dunn, also known as Dad's Army's Lance Corporal Jones, actor Nigel Havers, Tory MP Boris Johnson and blind pianist George Shearing.

He also has tales to tell about fellow commentators John Arlott, Brian Johnston and Jim Swanton, who lived in Sandwich.

He continued: "It's humour more than anything. In the bit about the 1960s I read a piece of erotic poetry written by three of the great poets: Auden, Betjeman and MacNiece. It is one-and-a-half-lines long.

I SAY: Henry Blofeld takes to the stage

"I have been doing the show for four years now and have performed it over 100 times, but every night is different."

It is only when the conversation turns to England's current crop of cricketers that Blowers' tone turns glum again.

"I don't think very much of them to be honest. I commentated on the Brisbane and Melbourne legs of the Ashes in 2005 and we were very lucky to win then, and we played a lot worse than we needed to have done this time around."

The show is in two acts, with the first concentrating on his childhood in the Norfolk countryside, right up to his days in Eton and flunking out of Cambridge University.

The second is all about his adult life, and features many stories about his celebrity friends and colleagues in the commentary box.

Tickets for the show are available from the box office on 01892 614243, priced £15.

All the comforts of home, none of the worries

After working hard all your life, don't you think you deserve a little pampering? Wouldn't it be nice to enjoy the garden without having to lift a finger, and who wants to worry about all those little jobs that need doing around your home?

McCarthy & Stone may have the solution with their brand new purpose-built retirement development in Margate.

Joyce & Frank Fridds

Joyce and her husband Frank had been living in a three bedroom detached bungalow before moving to Dickens Court.

Joyce said "Neither Frank nor I like gardening and in the bungalow we had so much stuff that we thought we'd better get rid of it and make a new start while we were still fit and healthy.

"As soon as we heard that McCarthy & Stone were building in Cliftonville, we were down to the sales office like a shot."

Peace of Mind

Freedom from security worries makes for a happier, more carefree retirement.

Shortly after moving in, Frank and Joyce went on a cruise to Norway with the peace of mind knowing that their flat would be safe whilst they were away.

Like all McCarthy & Stone developments, Dickens Court has a TV camera entry system at the main entrance and a house manager to keep an eye on things. Furthermore, each apartment is connected to a 24-hour personal emergency system.

Making new Friends

As Dickens Court has filled up with new people, Frank and Joyce have been enjoying the company of their fellow residents.

Frank said "It's great fun now that the social side of things has got going. We're both on the social committee so we find we don't have much time to laze about. Where we were living before we didn't really get to know our neighbours. In fact, we've made more friends since we've been here than we did in the six years we spent in the bungalow."

Dickens Court has been specially designed for people aged 60 and over who enjoy an independent lifestyle.

Other facilities at Dickens Court include a lift to all floors, a laundry room and a guest suite for visiting family and friends.

Dickens Court, Margate.

Apartments at Dickens Court are priced from £129,950.

Show Complex open daily from 10.30am to 5.00pm.

At last, friends and family can celebrate Bob

By PHIL REILLY
phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

FAMILY and friends of Bob Woolmer paid tribute to the former Kent cricketer at a packed memorial service near Lord's Cricket Ground last week.

Around 230 mourners, including his widow Gill and sons Dale and Russell, attended the service at St John's Wood Church in London on Friday.

The former England batsman and coach of Pakistan died during the cricket world cup in Jamaica in March.

The thanksgiving service was organised by the English Cricket Board after chairman David Morgan was assured Mr Woolmer died of natural causes, following months of speculation he may have been murdered.

Among the speakers was former Kent and England captain Chris Cowdrey, son of his former teammate Colin, who re-enacted a memorable scene from Mr Woolmer's life.

Donning a cap and cricket bat at the lectern, he recalled an occasion when Mr Woolmer had been bowled out early, after which he retreated to the dressing room and proceeded to act out the innings he believed he should have had.

Paying tribute to his departed friend, Mr Cowdrey described him as "the most honourable-spirited person I had ever known".

He said: "I remember once when I batted with him as a young cricketer against Sussex that I was told to make quick runs. I hit a ball to the boundary and he came down the pitch and said it was the worst shot he had ever seen. He then played the perfect extra cover drive against John Snow, England's premier bowler.

"As a coach, he was able to teach lesser mortals and gave children all over the world the benefit of his knowledge and enthusiasm."

Rev Anders Bergquist, who led the service, said it finally gave friends and family the chance to celebrate Mr Woolmer's life after months of uncertainty surrounding his death.

He said: "There was a definite sense of celebration. This was the first big occasion for us to really give thanks for Bob's life without the speculation and uncertainty hanging over us all.

Pioneer

"One thing that came across from the speakers was his great admiration for Colin Cowdrey, which I was not aware of.

"He was a real influence and mentor for Bob, and there were some rather lovely things said about him being an inspiration both as a player and a coach." Colin Cowdrey died in 2000.

Carl Openshaw, the chairman of Kent County Cricket Club, read the opening lesson, and Mr Woolmer's former teammate Dennis Amiss and Ian Metcalfe, vice chairman of Warwickshire cricket club, were also among the readers.

KCCC chief executive Paul Millman said Mr Woolmer would be remembered as one of the game's great coaches.

He added: "Regrettably, I didn't know him that well personally, but he was a pioneer in the game in terms of coaching.

"It was clear from those who spoke he was an inspiration for many people in the game."

Among the congregation were Ashes winners Ashley Giles and Mike Gatting, as well as Sir Tim Rice, David Graveney, Derek Underwood and David Morgan.

After the service, the congregation made the short walk to the Long Room at Lord's, where a reception was held. Rev Bengquist added that there was a "real buzz" to the reception at Lord's. He said: "People were swapping stories and it went on for hours."

Police in Jamaica opened a murder investigation following Mr Woolmer's death in a hotel room shortly after his Pakistan team had been knocked out of the tournament in humiliating fashion by Ireland.

It was only in June police called off the investigation, confirming Mr Woolmer died of natural causes.

MP attacks Government over differences in council funding

By PHIL REILLY
phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

SEVENOAKS MP Michael Fallon has accused the Government of "massive bias" after figures revealed huge discrepancies in central funding for councils.

After a question in Parliament by Mr Fallon, local government minister John Healey revealed the area currently receives less than half the funding per person than Tony Blair's former constituency, Sedgefield in County Durham.

In 2006-2007, Sevenoaks district received £61 per head, compared with £135 in Sedgefield.

This contrasts starkly with the figures from 1997-1998, Tony Blair's first year in office, when the former PM's district received just £66 per person and Sevenoaks received £60.

The cash is from the Government's revenue grant, which should contribute around 25 per-cent of the money spent by local authorities.

Mr Fallon accused the Government of funnelling money to Labour constituencies in the north of England, despite the needs of communities in Kent and the South East, and warned that council taxpayers have to make up the difference.

He said: "There is a huge and unacceptable discrepancy, and it is hugely unfair on the taxpayers here.

"Sevenoaks has probably been treated just about the worst of any council in England over the last 10 years.

"Why are we at the bottom of every funding table? I always get the same reply: Sevenoaks is an affluent area. But parts of Sevenoaks town itself and Swanley have real problems, and across Kent there are some real areas of deprivation.

"I know Sedgefield well because I lived in Darlington, which is in the district. It has a couple of towns that are relatively deprived, but there are affluent rural parts as well.

"Unemployment rates in areas like Sedgefield aren't too different to places in Kent.

"The second thing the figures show, as I long suspected, is northern councils have been much better treated than those in the south. Those are Labour councils."

Rises

Kent County Council leader Paul Carter said the figures showed why Kent taxpayers have seen much bigger council tax rises than others in the North East.

He said: "These figures really bring home to the people of Kent the amount of money being distributed away from them.

"It has resulted in council tax rises of four or five per cent, while in the North East and metropolitan areas they've seen massive growth in grants.

"We've had to make do with much, much less and still try to improve frontline services.

"For example, schools budgets in the North East, the Labour heartland, have had significant growth and we've at best flatlined.

"The Treasury has come up with a formula to distribute money that is so complex and confused that it is very difficult to unpick, but when you look at the trend year by year the North East, as exemplified in Sedgefield, it is incredibly unfair."

KCC has also warned that the county stands to lose more than £1 billion over the next decade if existing grants and inflation rates continue at similar levels.

UNACCEPTABLE: MP Michael Fallon says councils in the North are better treated

Hislop's words for new book on Great War

IAN Hislop has provided the foreword for a new book on World War One that features unseen images and eyewitness accounts of one of the greatest tragedies of the 20th century.

The satirist, who lives in Sissinghurst, recently presented Channel 4's Not Forgotten series, which explored how the 'war to end all wars' transformed British society.

Leading Great War historian Max Arthur looked at photographic archives and private collections throughout Europe for his book, The Faces of World War I.

It contains rarely seen photographs of the enlistment process and early training of the soldiers before they were plunged into the conflict.

Hislop is editor of Private Eye and a team captain on the BBC news quiz, Have I got News for You.

Safe measures

THE European Commission has announced that pounds, ounces, pints and miles are safe.

Since 1995, goods sold in Europe have had to display metric weights and measurements alongside the imperial measurements.

This tradition was due to end in 2009, but European industry Commissioner Gunter Verheugen will announce it will continue.

Richard Ashworth, the Conservative MEP, said: "Imperial measurements are an important part of British traditions and there was never any need to scrap them.

"We now have the best of both worlds. Many younger people now work in litres and grams and will be able to continue to do so, but we can also keep our conventional measurements too."

MoD under fire as troops in Iraq left unprotected

By PHIL REILLY
phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

A TORY MP has slammed the Government for leaving frontline troops in Iraq unprotected while continuing to spend billions on projects to build new submarines, aircraft and armoured vehicles.

Canterbury MP Julian Brazier, who has served as an officer in the Territorial Army, said British soldiers were being killed in Basra because the accommodation housing them in the city's airport has not been adequate to defend them from insurgent attacks.

Around 550 British troops withdrew from Basra Palace to join others at the airport earlier this month.

Mr Brazier's comments followed a report released this week by the Commons defence select committee that revealed the Ministry of Defence is around £2.6 billion over budget on a number of major projects, including the new Astute class attack submarines and the Nimrod surveillance aircraft.

He said: "I think the Government hasn't really thought through where its priorities should lie.

"At a time when defence spending is desperately overstretched it is not providing the equipment needed in Afghanistan and Iraq, as well as cutting funding to the Territorial Army and spending on very, very expensive projects.

"I am in favour of both, but what we can't do is say we'll fund all these things when the people at the sharp end, our boys on the frontline, are going to suffer.

"They haven't even paid for protection for the people serving at Basra Airport who are staying in unprotected portable buildings.

"A number of people killed there died simply because they are unprotected in their accommodation."

Gravesham MP Adam Holloway, who served in the Grenadier Guards and is a member of the defence select committee, said it was important a balance is struck between spending on current campaigns and long-term projects.

He said: "If you spend everything you have on stuff for today then we wouldn't have anything for the future. You have to develop new bits of equipment.

"What is clear is that the Armed Forces are under-funded because we are trying to be in two places at once with a defence budget that hasn't risen to meet the needs.

"However much we are spending it is not enough for what our political masters want soldiers to do."

Nearly 300 British servicemen have been killed in Afghanistan and Iraq since 2001.

The select committee's report, which was released on Monday, shows the MoD's 20 biggest weapons projects were a total of 433 months, or over 36 years, behind schedule.

Spending

Ministers said a review of its spending plans has trimmed £781 million, but the report claimed £448m of the cuts was just transferred to other parts of the defence budget or reclassified as spending on other projects.

It also slammed the MoD for "failure to properly understand and budget for costs" and making investment decisions based on inaccurate forecasts.

An MoD spokesman said it had a "long-term plan" to provide hardened accommodation for personnel, and insisted priority was given to providing equipment for frontline soldiers.

He said: "We are doing all that is possible in the interim until the longer term solution [for accommodation] can be constructed.

"More than £10bn worth of equipment has been delivered to the Armed Forces in the last three years. A further £6bn a year is spent supporting it. Equipment valued at more than £4.5bn was delivered to the Armed Forces during 2006-2007."

He added that the MoD had welcomed the report, but did not wish to comment on it.

The conference, called Keeping It Real, will help tourism industry professionals provide a better experience for visitors. Just like mother

WITH her platinum hair and perfect red pout, Peaches Geldof's first foray into modelling drew countless comparisons with her late mother.

Paula Yates' daughter with Sir Bob Geldof bears a striking resemblance to the TV presenter who died from a heroin overdose in 2000.

The 18-year-old who lives at Davington Priory, Faversham, was chosen to head Australian fashion label Dotti's campaign for her "British cool and charisma".

Sir Bob's outspoken daughter has become well known for her wardrobe of chain store finds mixed with designer pieces.

A man at his peak

Leading climber tells of life in mountaineering

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

A MOUNTAINEER of international repute will visit Kent to speak about his amazing adventures tackling first ascents in remote alpine ranges.

Mick Fowler was described by fellow mountaineer Sir Chris Bonington – who was knighted for his services to the sport – as "the most successful, innovative mountaineer of the last 20 years".

The leading alpinist will be giving a lecture about his experiences in Orpington next month.

Expeditions

This week, he told this newspaper of his expeditions to far-flung places such as Peru, Nepal, China, Tibet and the Himalayas – travelling to the edge of civilisation looking for unclimbed routes to conquer using only the equipment he could carry on his back.

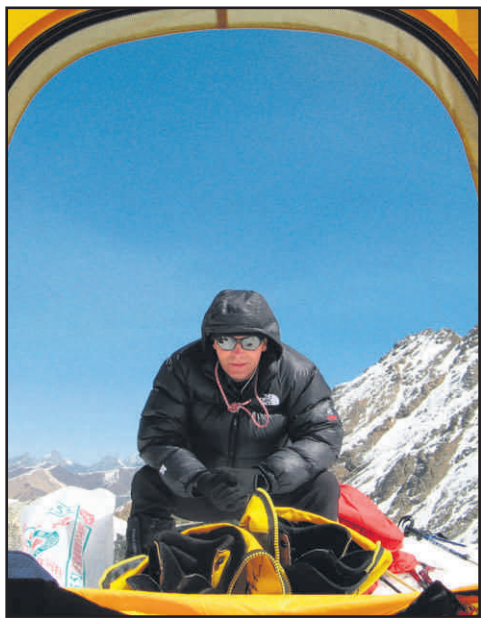

But during the week, and when he is not on annual leave, Mr Fowler works for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs as a taxman in the Midlands.

Speaking from his office in Derby, he said: "It is not just about pushing the boundaries [physically], it is about finding new, interesting and inspiring challenges and going to new places.

"At the moment I am inspired by East Tibet where very few of the mountains have been climbed and where very few Westerners have been. A man up in the valley said he had never seen white people before except on satellite television."

Mr Fowler said traditional routes with hundreds of other climbers detracted from the adventure and exploration aspect of mountaineering.

He was the first climber to ascend the White Cliffs of Dover and the chalk cliffs at Beachy Head using axes and crampons in the 1980s.

A HEAD FOR HEIGHTS: Mick Fowler, 51

He said: "It was the start of a new phase in British climbing. The cliffs at Dover are amazing. They are like a massive sponge, if you can dig in far enough you can hang there."

The 51-year-old described the chalk cliffs as very similar to ice with the same challenges, such as looser rock, to overcome.

Although his two lives, as desk-bound civil servant and intrepid mountaineer, may seem poles apart, he uses the same analytical skills to make judgements as a climber.

He said: "It does get scary. It is always a matter of your own judgement and sometimes you get it a bit wrong. I can remember one time climbing in Scotland at Glen Torridon in the north west. I was climbing an ice ridge that had never been done before. It turned out to be more strenuous than expected. I ran out of strength and had to attach myself to a rockside – I ended up hanging from it until my arms recovered enough to carry on."

He modestly described the dramatic incident as "memorable".

In 31 years of climbing, Mr Fowler has had experience of tragedy. In 1997 while abseiling down the Chang a Bang in India, he could do nothing as a fellow climber was knocked off the cliff face by an avalanche and fell to his death.

But the father-of-two did not want to dwell on the episode, saying it was a complete one off and hopefully lessons had been learned from it.

Tents and portaledges have no place in Mr Fowler's expeditions. He spoke of nights spent hanging on the side of mountains in the Himalayas keeping warm by wearing all his clothes and supported only by his climbing equipment.

Asked if it made for a good night's sleep, he replied: "A lot of that is experience. You know if it comes to it that your equipment is good enough to hang there the whole night. There is no comfortable place to sleep – you have to have the mentality to succeed."

In 2003 Mr Fowler and one of his climbing partners, Paul Ramsden, were awarded the prestigious Piolet D'Or – Golden Ice Axe – for their ascent of the North Face of Siguniang in China's Sichuan Province, where they spent six nights sleeping on mountain ledges.

As well as a nine-to-five job, Mr Fowler has a family to consider: children Tess, 15, and Alec, 13, and wife Nicki, who understands the other side of his life, having enjoyed the sport herself.

His next adventure will bring him slightly closer to home as he goes in search of the stunning unclimbed sea cliffs on the west coast of the Orkney Islands before heading back to east Tibet.

• Mr Fowler will be speaking at the Cotswold Outdoor's Orpington store on October 2 at 7.30pm. Call 01689 885 560 to book a ticket.

Police could strike over wage dispute

RANK and file police officers in Kent have warned they may demand the right to strike if the Government refuses to meet their wage demands.

By PHIL REILLY
phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

It is currently illegal for officers to take industrial action, but Kent Police Federation chairman Ian Pointon said that if demands were not met they may press for a change in the law.

The federation represents officers between the ranks of constable and chief inspector.

Mr Pointon said officers felt "taken advantage of" by Gordon Brown and his colleagues after talks over national pay increases broke down.

They had been offered an annual rise of 2.35 per cent, to be introduced in stages, but Mr Pointon described this offer as "insulting".

The current starting wage for constables is £21,000, rising to just under £33,000 after 10 years.

Statistics

According to latest statistics, the average salary for a full-time worker is £23,244, compared with £25,376 for workers in the public sector.

He said: "People are angry, they won't put up with that. I can see calls from officers for a change in the law getting louder.

"It is a nightmare scenario, but it is in the Government's hands. It is up to them to treat officers honourably and with decency.

"I think people will turn around and say we think it is unacceptable police will go on strike, but [it is] equally unacceptable that the Government doesn't act with honour."

The warning follows a 24-hour walk out by prison officers last month, when police officers were drafted in to take their place.

It had previously been against the law for prison officers to strike, but this was replaced by a voluntary agreement brokered by then Home Secretary David Blunkett in 2003.

Mr Pointon continued: "We don't know where the final place is going to be. Nobody predicted prison officers would walk out. We can't do that, but we don't know what is around the corner.

"Gordon Brown has been bullish about public sector pay increases, but I wish he was equally bullish with MPs' expenses, which have gone up by 5.5 per cent."

Police pay increases are currently decided according to an index devised by Sir Clive Booth as part of a recent review.

Mr Pointon said this new way of working out rises was unfair on rank and file officers.

He added: "I think the reality is this is not just about the amount being offered, that's a bit of a side issue. The main issue is having a fair and transparent index for police officers.

"Currently, it does not take account of the restrictions placed on officers' private lives. They are responsible for their actions 24-7, they can't take an active part in politics and they can't belong to a trade union."

Dover MP Gwyn Prosser, who sits on the Government's Home Affairs Select Committee, accused the federation of "sabre rattling".

He said: "There will always be some in the service's rank and file members who will press to be released from the no-strike requirement, but I think the police as a whole is a responsible body. Individuals join up for the best reasons and they know better than you and I that they must maintain the no-strike arrangement. I'm sure the good sense of the British people will prevail."

The chief inspector of the constabulary, Sir Ronnie Flanagan, said this week that police forces across the country were bogged down in red tape and bureaucracy, causing them to "over record and under deliver".

This prompted Home Secretary Jacqui Smith to acknowledge that changes to working practices were necessary to make the service more effective.

KENT Police has changed the way it charges for its presence at public events, meaning some organisers could have to pay more.

Under the new policy, which comes into effect in April next year, profit-making events will pay a full charge, with charitable events paying half price.

There will be no fee for policing statutory events, such as ceremonial parades and Remembrance Day.

Kent Police project manager Trevor Hull said the policy was not designed as a means of making money, but to fall in line with national guidelines handed down by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

He said: "This means some events that had previously been charged will come out better off, and, unfortunately, there may be others which will be asked to pay more."

The charges only apply to events requiring 24 hours or more of police time, including strategic planning.

Kent's six area commanders still have authority to reduce the charges.

Improving travelling in Kent

Your one-stop guide to information and advice on travelling

Kent County Council

School travel plans to ease congestion

We all know that the start of a new school term means more traffic on the roads during peak times. To reduce the volume of traffic, Kent County Council is trying to cut down the number of private cars being used for the school run.

Getting to school by alternative modes of transport like walking, cycling, public transport and car sharing is easier than you think. Kent Highway Services are working together with a range of partners to develop and expand the options available.

Over half of Kent schools have now developed a School Travel Plan which is a detailed document setting out targets and actions for tackling the school run. This is part of a national initiative and has enabled Kent schools to tap into over £2 million of extra funding for small infrastructure improvements within their school grounds.

An important part of this work is making sure that parents and pupils know about the options already available to them.

We have looked at the current school travel information available on our website and developed a brand new page at www.kent.gov.uk/travel-to-school which links all the existing school travel information together in one place.

In addition, the website www.11-19travel.info has been set up to provide detailed information about public transport access to schools, including detailed maps to help you plan your journey. This was originally just for pupils aged 16-19, but extra funding means that the website has been expanded to include all of our secondary schools.

Tackling the school run has a major role to play in reducing congestion, so look out for initiatives in your area that should lead to a more relaxed school run for everyone.

Scanning the roads of Kent

There are nearly 8,400km of roads in Kent, excluding motorways and trunk roads. Kent Highway Services is responsible for maintaining these roads to make sure they are safe for use, so it's important that we know when roads need repairing. It's also important to know the priority of repairs, so we can make sure that the money for carriageway works is being spent as effectively as possible.

Highway Inspectors carry out routine safety inspections – busy roads are inspected monthly and minor roads are inspected every six months. In addition, we carry out annual detailed surveys of the condition of the whole road network. On the busy roads, a new high tech machine is being used that scans the road surface using lasers and video cameras.

This scanner machine measures four main elements of the road condition and these measurements are taken in the opposite direction each year to make sure that an accurate picture can be built up over time.

The road elements measured are:

- Rutting – to check for misshaping of the road, due to damage caused by heavy goods vehicles;
- Ride quality – to check the evenness of the road for assessing road deterioration;
- Texture – to check that the road can drain surface water;
- Cracking – to check for indications of weakness that could lead to further deterioration of the road.

The measurements are then assigned a value for each 10 metre stretch of road and rates the results as green, amber or red. From this information, a report is generated listing any necessary treatments or repairs in order of priority.

Using a machine to check the roads means that the priority ratings are consistent across the county and assists the engineers to ensure that the right repairs are attended to first. However, we do still appreciate your help to identify roads for repair, so if you see something that needs reporting please contact us on 08458 247 800.

New pothole technology comes to Kent

Repairing a pothole may seem like a small, quick job, but in reality it takes qualified workers more time than you may think to carry out the repairs properly and safely.

That's why Kent Highway Services is investing in new technology to speed up pothole repairs.

During September, a small fleet of specialist vehicles will be seen on Kent's rural roads undertaking a £1 million programme of repairs to damaged roads. The vehicles, known as 'Jetpatcher', can repair up to 15 times more potholes and broken road edges than traditional methods.

The 'Jetpatchers' use high pressure jets to clean the pothole, before filling them with asphalt. Because this can cause dust and debris to fly around, we will not be using 'Jetpatcher' in urban areas, so they will be used on our rural roads and lanes instead. By using this on our rural roads, it will allow more of our existing repair crews to work in the urban areas using more traditional methods.

We do our best to monitor roads for potholes, but unfortunately we can't be everywhere. If you see a pothole that needs attention, please get in touch with us by calling us on 08458 247 800 or by visiting our website at www.kent.gov.uk/highways

PICKING: Hops at Tony Redsell's farm just outside Faversham

Hop harvest time

Traditional crop that keeps growing strong

By HUW POWELL
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE fields are a hive of activity this month, as the famous Kentish hop harvest is gathered.

The pungent smell is unmistakable, as tractors and trailers overflowing with the fresh cut vines scuttle between the gardens and farmyards. Oast houses and the skilled driers are on 24-hour duty as picked flowers are processed and packed ready for the market place. The hopping is in full swing.

Farmer Tony Redsell, based outside Faversham, has 200 acres of hop garden. He is rightly proud of that heady scent. That is what makes his crops highly valued by both English and foreign beer producers. It has also won him the overall first prize of supreme hop, and 'best in show' from the Institute of Brewers and English Hop Growers Association in 2006.

Award-winning

The business of hops and good beer runs in Mr Redsell's family. His father started growing the vines in 1938, and he took over running the business in 1960. He has seen a lot of changes in the trade, but said that the fundamental principles of growing an award-winning harvest have not changed.

A big change did come in the 1970s with the type of hop produced by continental farmers. New breeds were introduced that had an alpha acid content three times higher than the traditional English varieties. Mr Redsell said it is the alpha acid which gives beer its distinctive bitter flavour, and brewers soon found they only needed a third as many hops to achieve the same taste. This growers revolution combined with a changing public pallet, as drinkers moved away from ale towards lager, meant a lean period for the older English variety of hop and their farmers.

But the English hops and their unique aroma have something special to offer. It is with this that Tony Redsell and other traditional English growers stemmed the tide and secured a good future. He said with a quiet smile: "I like to think that the production of English hops has stabilised."

The older-style hop is now a valued commodity – "people are demanding a difference from the mass produced beers" – and it's here the Kent growers can supply a need.

Mr Redsell has also seen a change in the workforce. When hand-picking died away, again in the 1970s, London families gradually stopped coming. Aside from the head drier, Peter Shead and his assistant Lesley Turner who both work all year with the crop, the harvest workforce is mostly students who travel over from Eastern Europe.

Mr Redsell thinks that the Londoners of old had "more traditional character" but values his Eastern European student workforce highly: "They understand how to work".

As the harvest draws to a close and summer drifts towards autumn, Mr Redsell thinks that it has generally been a good crop. He said the pungent flowers enjoyed the mild weather which has been a feature of 2007. The hop gardens are being quickly stripped of the thick green vines that have come to symbolise Kent as much as our oast houses or white cliffs. The wooden poles will stand in stark rows through the winter, before the young plants are strung up again in the spring and the whole process restarts.

But remember, through the cold winter months you can still find the essence of English summer in a pint of the finest local ale. As the advert might say: "It is probably the best beer in the world."

Warning after deer's death

THE RSPCA in Kent has issued a warning on the dangers of litter following the death of a fallow deer which got caught up in rope and died hooked to a tree.

The tragic accident happened in Foal Hurst Wood near Paddock Wood.

A member of the public found the deer hanging from a branch.

RSPCA Kent Chief Inspector Steve Dockery said: "This poor animal clearly became entangled in the nylon rope then got the rope caught around a tree and could not get away.

"It would have been a slow, painful death but it could be prevented if people were more careful."

Invicta FM's new charity message

THE children's charity operated by Kent radio station Invicta FM has changed its name.

Help A Local Child, which has raised funds to help disadvantaged children and young people across the county, has been renamed Help A Kent Child, to help define the charity as a Kent organisation.

The charity has been assisting disadvantaged children in Kent since it began in 2003 and has raised around £100,000 over the last four years through a series of events, concerts and a variety of fundraising activities.

Charity coordinator Neville Dack said: "We are entering a new chapter of our charity work at Invicta FM and felt that our name simply doesn't convey this effectively and was preventing us from getting our message across to new audiences.

"We believe that our new identity will better reflect who we are and will have the impact and longevity we need as we enter this exciting period of growth.

"You don't need to leave the county to find children who experience the effects of poverty, abuse, neglect, homelessness, violence, crime, illness and disability; or who are carers for their own parents."

The charity has been supported by a number of Kent businesses, including KOS Media, publishers of this newspaper.

THE North Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty would have been covered in new homes had Imperial College and its supporters in local government got their way. But a successful campaign by the people of Wye saw off the threat and today the area remains one of the most beautiful in the Garden of England.

This photograph is by BJ 'Trit' Tritton, of Boughton Aluph, who pointed out the Wye Crown, which can be seen in the left of the picture, and the Devil's Kneading Trough, in the right.

If you would like to see your photograph included in our occasional Images of Kent series, send it to KOS Media, Images of Kent, Apple Barn, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent TN25 6SR, or email editorial@kosmedia.co.uk.

Relaxing has never been so good for you !

RECORD numbers of children applied for their chance to dance alongside former Boyzone star Shane Lynch at auditions in Chatham this week.

Around 220 girls aged seven and upwards queued on Sunday morning for their chance to join the Dublin-born pop star, who also starred in reality TV shows Love Island and The Games, in Snow White and the Seven Dwarves at the Central Theatre this December.

The girls were given the chance to show off their dancing skills on the theatre's stage alongside a professional choreographer, with 40 chosen to take part in the show.

The pantomime also stars the 70s singer Sheila Ferguson.

Murder charges

THREE brothers appeared before magistrates on Wednesday charged with the murder of a 51-year-old man.

Samuel Powell, aged 22, Jimmy Powell, aged 23 and Phillip Powell, aged 25, all unemployed and of Star Lane, St Mary Cray, Orpington, are each accused of the murder of William Lee.

Mr Lee died in hospital three days after an incident outside his home in Sutton-at-Hone on August 26, in which he suffered a serious leg injury.

An inquest into Mr Lee's death has been opened and adjourned.

The men were arrested and charged by police on September 11.

All three were remanded in custody to next appear at Maidstone Crown Court on September 24.

Broadcaster to cut local news service to save £40m

By PETER BOYES
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ITV MERIDIAN faces a major cost cutting exercise that will result in less local news broadcasting and job losses.

Pressure on advertising revenue and increased competition has forced ITV to admit its regional news structure is "unsustainable".

ITV has unveiled proposals to cut £40million from its regional services and wants to reduce the number of regions across the UK from 17 to nine.

In the Meridian area, this would mean a reduction of three sub-regions to one. At present, Meridian broadcasts three news programmes simultaneously, which would be reduced to one under the new proposals.

The new programme would cover Hampshire, Kent, Sussex and parts of Essex, Berkshire, Wiltshire, Dorset and Surrey.

An ITV spokeswoman said the programme could contain "out-opts" with localised news for Kent and East Sussex.

A statement from Mark Southgate, the managing director of ITV Meridian, said: "The plan for ITV Meridian is that there will be one well-resourced edition of Meridian Tonight serving the South and South East, which will carry the most important stories and reflect the life of the entire region.

Regulator

"It won't be dominated by one area, and there will be times within the programme when our service will split to enable us to offer news that is more specific to either the South or South East. News gathering teams will still be based around the region.

"At the moment these are only proposals. They require the approval of the regulator Ofcom, and will form part of its Public Service Broadcasting Review, which is due to be completed by the end of 2008.

"It is too early to say what impact this will have on staff at Meridian, though clearly it is likely to lead to some job losses in the future. Staff and unions will be fully consulted."

Nationally, ITV said it was committed to keeping a strong regional news service at the heart of the ITV1 schedule.

But it added: "The current regional and subregional structure is an analogue map in a digital age."

The Meridian region is expected to have switched over to digital broadcasting by 2012.

ITV currently spends £120m on regional news, providing 17 flagship programmes, four of which serve half the UK population, it said.

Damaging

The proposals are contained in a new five-year plan released by ITV executive chairman Michael Grade which are designed to restore growth to the business.

Mr Grade said: "By 2012, I want ITV to be widely acknowledged as the UK's favourite source of free, original entertainment across all popular platforms and devices, not just on television."

Bectu, the broadcast union, said the move was a "further significant and damaging step by the broadcaster away from its public service broadcasting" commitments.

The announcement was made on Wednesday – the same day as KOS Media, publisher of this newspaper, launched its own regional TV news service on the web. Log on to www.yourkenttv.co.uk.

‘Man is a mischievous baboon’

So said the late William Harvey, medical pioneer, physician to the king and subject of a new book

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

AMONG the jesters, dwarves and other entertainments in the bawdy court of King Charles I was a slightly less distinguished figure – a farm labourer.

Thomas Parr, of Shropshire, was brought before the monarch as a curiosity on account of his age. For Mr Parr was 152-years-old and was in top physical condition.

Historical sources record how he was still having sex at the ripe old age of 140. But shortly after arriving in London, Mr Parr fell ill as a result of the polluted city air and died.

William Harvey, who was the king’s physician at the time, carried out the autopsy and this bizarre episode is included in a new booklet about Mr Harvey, whose name was given to Ashford’s hospital.

Called Folkestone’s Most Famous Son, the booklet reveals how Mr Harvey, who famously discovered how blood circulates around the human body, lived a life full of interesting and less well-documented events.

Published in celebration of the 350th anniversary of his death, it tells how the scientist saved the lives of four women accused of witchcraft and travelled around the country with the king during the brutal civil war.

Author Paul Harris, who lives in Folkestone, said: “Obviously he is remembered for his discovery of how blood circulates but he also carried out a lot of other research.

“He was involved in many interesting things and there is a lot more to his life then you first realise.”

Born in Folkestone in 1578, Mr Harvey attended the King’s School in Canterbury before going to Cambridge’s Caius College.

He then studied surgery and anatomy at Padua University in Italy.

During research for his book De Motu Cordis – On the Motion of the Heart – he became the first scientist to use experimental methods to uncover one of the mysteries of the human body rather than relying on classical teachings.

The Harvey Bodies, stored at the Royal College of Physicians, show the veins, arteries and nerves he used to make his famous discovery.

He also studied embryology and insects in great depth but his research was lost as England descended into civil war after the clash between Parliament and Charles I.

Before working as court physician to Charles I he had been appointed doctor to James I, 12 years earlier, showing his prestigious position in society.

Mr Harris, who writes about local history, said: “At a time of hysteria surrounding the existence of witches, when thousands of innocent women were put on trial, tortured and hanged accused of practicing black magic, Mr Harvey remained the rational doctor.

“He headed up a medical panel investigating seven women accused of witchcraft and the king pardoned four of them as a result.”

Mr Harris, who is editor of Folkestone Creative magazine, added: “He was a rational man and wholly sceptical of witchcraft. But he was employed by the king, who was a full believer, so he had to be a bit careful.”

Mr Harvey died aged 79 having developed a number of eccentricities and according to the book, his favourite saying was: “Man is but a mischievous baboon”.

RATIONAL THINKER: William Harvey had no time for witch-hunts, but had to watch his tongue for the fear of the wrath of King Charles

COMMENT

Pride of Kent

IT IS only in exceptional circumstances that the George Cross is issued to a place or a group, but it would be hard to argue that Dover did not have an extremely compelling case.

The town and its citizens felt the full force of the Nazi war machine in a way that nowhere else in the country did, coming under constant shelling, bombing and machine gun fire during the German occupation of France.

Many parts of the town were completely destroyed, and more than 200 civilians lost their lives with countless more injured.

Continuing with their everyday lives in spite of this bombardment, the people of Dover displayed great gallantry, and fostered a strong community spirit that is still evident today.

In many ways, Dover was the pride of Kent during the war and her famous White Cliffs symbolised the strength and resilience of our nation.

Being given this honour would give the town and its people a much-needed boost, and few could honestly say they do not deserve it.

The price of war

A COMMONS defence select committee report this week revealed the Ministry of Defence to be over budget on a host of long-term weapons projects at a time when frontline troops are critically under funded.

Canterbury MP Julian Brazier's comments that it is letting down our boys in Iraq and Afghanistan, and particularly Basra, will strike a chord with many, and it is clear now the Government must look again at where its priorities lie.

Brave soldiers who risk their lives must be properly equipped and protected.

OPINION: Pfizer: prey to predator

STEPHEN LADYMAN MP on his former employer's decision to axe 420 jobs

PFIZER'S decision to close manufacturing at its Sandwich site is a real body blow.

Thankfully, the research business on the site is not affected by the announcement and will continue to directly employ more than 3,000 people, but we can ill afford the loss of 420 high-quality jobs from the manufacturing business in an area where unemployment is already too high

Pfizer has said it will do its best to redeploy as many of those whose jobs will go as possible.

In addition, John Hutton MP, the Secretary of State for Business and Enterprise, has promised me the Government will do everything it can to help.

But the decision still means 420 fewer directly employed local job opportunities and contractors and other indirectly employed service providers on the site might also be affected and some of their staff could lose their jobs too.

I first moved to Kent in 1990 to work for Pfizer, only leaving in 1997 when I became the local MP. At the time I started working there manufacturing was very much the dominant arm of the Sandwich business and it employed well over 1,000 people, compared to about 500 in research.

In the years that followed the balance shifted and once this week's announcement is implemented there won't be a manufacturing job left on the site.

Back in 1990 Pfizer was a company that prized its workforce and set great store on being loyal to them.

It even resisted the rash of takeover attempts prevalent in the 90s pharmaceutical sector precisely by investing heavily in its staff and relying on them to produce the sort of results that would allow the company to grow and become stronger.

This strategy paid off in a massive way as the research teams delivered a string of new medicines and manufacturing produced them efficiently and cost effectively until Pfizer grew to become the biggest pharmaceutical company in the world.

On the way, however, its management could not resist the temptation to turn the company from being potential takeover 'prey' into 'predator' and a string of mergers and takeovers followed.

Of course, when two companies join up there is often excess capacity and something has to go – a process that sounds benign until you realise that the 'excess capacity' that has to be shed translates into people's jobs.

It is that process that has been going on in the company in the last few years and which has led to this week's dreadful announcement.

In many ways the Pfizer of today is a very different operation to the company of the 1990s.

END OF THE LINE: Drug manufacturing at Pfizer is set to close

This is not entirely its fault, of course, because in a world of global trading and manufacturing there is no room for sentiment and jobs will always migrate to those parts of the world that can do them most cheaply.

Nevertheless, the men and women in manufacturing in Sandwich provided a quality of service to the company that I doubt its management will find anywhere else in the world and their loyalty and endeavour have been poorly rewarded.

All this, however, brings the importance of Gordon Brown's statement to the TUC into sharp focus.

He has again committed the Government to getting as close to full employment as possible and has promised a job "for every British worker".

It won't be easy – and Pfizer's announcement shows us all too clearly the fight we must wage to keep jobs in Britain.

• Dr Ladyman is MP for Thanet South and Vice Chairman of the Labour Party.

THE HEALTH BEAUTY & WELL BEING SHOW

Sporting disaster

To those of us being anywhere near the St Lawrence Ground, Kent Cricket Club's £10 million re-development scheme is a disaster.

As anyone knows who drives up Old Dover Road between three and six in the afternoon, the road is often jammed right between the Cross Keys and the Bat and Ball pubs with cars fetching children from school, or later people going home from work.

How Canterbury City Council ever came to approve the club's plan for a housing estate, a hotel and various other commercial activities aimed at drawing crowds beats me.

I love cricket and wish Kent cricketers well, but this scheme is, in my opinion, fraught with risk, apart from the pollution and inconvenience it will cause residents living nearby.

Musical memories

We went to see Pavarotti in 1993 and it was a fantastic experience with good memories.

Although we live in Bromley, on this weekend my niece reached her 18th birthday and we had travelled to Bridgewater in Somerset the day before. With my wife, I left there about 1pm in the afternoon and made haste along the M4 to Bromley, showered and changed and then on to the M20 to Leeds Castle.

The police would not allow any more cars to leave the motorway and diverted the rest to Ashford before we could pick up the old A20 back to Leeds village.

We managed to get into the parking area with enough time to walk down to the castle picking up our champagne picnic on the way (pre-ordered).

On reaching our seats we awaited the great man. This was a special surprise for my wife as she is a great fan.

I cannot remember how far into the repertoire it was but a huge full moon rose over the castle reflecting on the lake and then a skein of geese flew in front silhouetted against the golden globe.

I think even Pavarotti was taken to admire the scene.

At the end of the evening we walked back to the marquees and food caravans for a couple of glasses of wine before making our way to the car park and I think it was gone 1 o'clock before we got out onto the M20 where the police were still busy. A very remarkable day!

Phone services are 40 years behind the times

My stepdaughter and her husband have just returned to the UK from working abroad.

They had rented their house while they were away. A week ago they started to try to get their telephone re-installed.

There is wiring to the house and they had telephone service when they lived there. The tenants also had their own telephone service from BT.

For the last week they have been calling BT customer 'services' in India trying to get this done. Without success.

My stepdaughter has calculated that she has now spent 18 hours on her cell phone and other phones trying to find someone in BT who knows what they are doing.

Years ago this required someone to go into the exchange and reconnect some wires. Now it is all done by computer. But is everyone on holiday or what?

Forty years ago I went to Canada to work and was amazed when my telephone was connected in less than 24 hours. BT obviously is still more than 40 years behind.

Ofcom does not investigate individual complaints so what use is this organisation?

Mental health crisis

As someone who suffers from generalised anxiety disorder (GAD), a neurotic illness in which the main symptoms are chronic and persistent anxiety – in my case usually about staffing levels (and allocating work activities among an ever-decreasing number of contracted/experienced staff) at work – I read with interest and much concern your story last week, "Report exposes mental health concerns", not least because on average one in four adults throughout the UK and not just in Kent will experience a mental health problem in the course of a year.

I am, for the time being at least, one of the lucky ones in the sense that I currently receive counselling via my local PCT to help me manage my anxiety and related depression, albeit one had to wait for over a year after a suicide attempt to receive this, which may have come too late but for the support I receive from staff and fellow members of the Tunbridge Wells Mental Health Resource.

I have many friends who rely upon the support and services provided by charities and voluntary organisations, in the absence of adequate statutory mental health provision, and cannot help feeling that this number can but only increase as the ever-increasing number of migrants to the area, ageing population and growing number of lone-parent families across the county in general and in Tunbridge Wells borough in particular, adds to the pressure on already overstretched and under-funded services.

Europe protests

Gordon Brown is engaged in one of the rankest betrayals of modern electoral history. Having won office on the basis of an explicit manifesto promise that there would be a referendum on the EU constitution, he is now reneging.

He has evidently calculated he can get away with it — that the rest of us don't much care whether or not our country is progressively absorbed into a European state. It's up to us to prove him wrong.

On September 22, Kent Conservatives will organise a series of meetings to demand Labour honour its pledge and give us the promised referendum.

Sixty-seven years ago, in Kentish skies, the Battle of Britain was raging. Our fathers were prepared to defend, with force of arms, our right to live under our own laws and our own Parliament. Let's not toss that right lightly aside.

Come and show your support at one of the following meetings:

- Rochester: 10.30am, St Joseph's Maths School, Maidstone Road
- Maidstone: 1.30pm, town centre, outside Marks & Spencer
- Deal: 4pm High Street
- Ramsgate: 5pm corner of Queen, Harbour and King streets

'pro' and 'anti' treaty people are on, they are entitled to a vote, in a referendum, on the issue.

At the last election all three of the main parties supported a referendum on the constitution. The new treaty contains almost all the same proposals in a new form. Almost every other European leader admits that the new version of the constitution is essentially the same as the old. But now the Government wants to back out of its promise to hold a referendum.

Most disturbing is the incredibly arrogant stance of Dartford's MP, Dr Howard Stoate. He apparently has concerns that the treaty will be too difficult for 'ordinary' people to understand. My reply to that is this – if he trusts the electorate to vote for him at the next election he should trust them on this issue as well.

12 weeks is the norm

No-one likes the idea of the independent Post Office closing down sub-post offices whether they are in rural areas or in towns, but it is a bit rich for Kent County Council's Conservatives to criticise the Post Office for only giving people a six-week consultation period.

Those of us who have dealt with Kent County Council's campaign to close primary schools will know that only six weeks was given to parents to put their case together.

But still worse was the four days consultation period given to councillors to comment on proposals for children's centres. After our protests this was "generously" extended to four weeks.

I would certainly agree with the Department of Trade and Industry that a consultation period of 12 weeks should be the norm when the closure of a school or a post-office is proposed.

Cllr Derek Smyth
Kent County Council

Slow is responsible

The letter from AT Mancini last week in response to Terry Hudson, who seems to think it's okay to break the speed limit, reminded me of what one of the training officers said during a lecture on my first police driving course. "Any fool can drive fast; you don't need any skill at all to do that".

I would say to Terry Hudson and those of his ilk, trying to emulate Lewis Hamilton on public roads, with all the hazards with which you are confronted and the danger you present to other road users, is neither skilful, nor clever. You develop real skill by teaching yourself to drive responsibly.

I suggest you begin by making a vow to yourself that for a week you will drive everywhere within the speed limit. Sadly, I think you'd fail, probably wouldn't even make it through the first day and have to resign yourself to the fact that you're just another of the many millions of drivers who speed every day, instead of being one of the select band of probably less than five per cent of drivers who drive responsibly every time they get behind the wheel.

I'd like nothing better than for you to prove me wrong, but I'm not holding my breath.

Christopher Hudson-Gool
Maidstone

Doing it all by hand

I am writing in response to the letter titled 'Question of Quality' by Michael K Baldwin, which refers to the lack of quality craft around the county and suggests that Kent County Council organises and host an exhibition of this nature.

Well, I would like to inform and reassure Mr Baldwin that craft is in fact flourishing in Kent and KCC does in fact already organise an annual craft exhibition held at County Hall, Maidstone.

This annual exhibition currently in its eighth year and titled By Hand has over the years featured the work of in excess of 135 Kentish artists and shown a range of high quality work which has included painting to basketry, ceramics and glassware and sculpture to jewellery. Each year visitor figures rise, sales increase and the artists find a new and enthusiastic audience.

Application to exhibit is by invitation, although emerging and new artists' applications are encouraged and welcomed. The exhibition held between late November and January of each year attracts a wealth of visitors, many who may have never visited a gallery before but come looking for that extra special and unique Christmas gift.

So please Mr Baldwin have faith and visit this years By Hand exhibition as I believe you will not only be incredibly impressed but pleasantly surprised at how reasonable priced such unique work can be.

Victoria Danville Mannering

Indomitable Mr Frey

I am reluctant to criticise Terry Kendall after he was kind enough to call me "indomitable" last week but he has made a couple of errors.

It is not me that "labels 70 per cent of our school children as failures" but Kent County Council and its 11-plus test.

Despite what Mr Kendall says, parents in Kent have not had the chance to vote to either to stop the 11-plus or to keep it.

So long as the Government keeps the regulations on the petition that must come before a vote on selection, parents will never get the chance to vote.

A school year just isn't enough time to complete the petition and the voting because this isn't a normal petition.

It isn't just a matter of putting your signature on a piece of paper but requires the collection of about a dozen pieces of information including the name and address of their child and the school it attends.

Many parents are unwilling to give this information to a stranger, particularly if their children are very young. It doesn't help my cause but I think they are sensible not to.

STEP – Stop The Eleven Plus

Leave grammars alone

Terry Kendall is right and Mr Frey should stop and think; if he were to carry his pet hatred to its logical conclusion all the universities would have to close down because they have entrance examinations.

Or is the real reason more prosaic; did someone close to him fail the 11-plus?

Leave the grammar schools alone, because from them come our future doctors, scientists etc.

GETTING to grips with sculpting in bronze takes some serious skills, but now the craft is being offered as an adult education class for the first time.

The new professional bronze-casting course is provided by Kent County Council's adult education service starting in the autumn.

It will be held at the Meltdowns Studio in Ramsgate and led by international artist Stephen Melton, widely recognised as one of the UK's most experienced practitioners.

Anyone signing up can learn and develop their skills from using modelling materials to casting a bronze piece of art after receiving professional tuition to an extremely high standard.

There will be two one-day taster courses on October 6 and November 11, ahead of the 10-week course, which begins on January 8 2008. This will give students the chance to try out the course and practice some of the techniques.

Course engineers staff for US firm

EXECUTIVES from an American firm have praised a degree course in electrical engineering at a Kent university.

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

Delegates from Cummins Power Generation, based in Minnesota, visited the University of Greenwich at Medway last week.

The university's school of engineering introduced the course specifically to help Cummins overcome recruitment problems caused by the national shortage of qualified electrical engineers.

Cummins employs 400 at Manston Park in Thanet, assembling generators and power production equipment for worldwide distribution.

The course is delivered on a part-time basis as a rolling programme over six years.

Elizabeth Carey, an executive from Cummins, said: "It was great to see for ourselves how the university is striving to enhance the skills of our company and industry.

"The shortage of highly qualified electrical engineers is a problem our industry is facing and the difficulties in recruiting suitably skilled staff are predicted to become more severe in coming years.

"We are delighted to have been able to work so closely with the University of Greenwich at Medway to develop a programme which meets the needs of our staff – contributing to their skills in the workplace as well as their personal career development."

Dr Stuart Ashenden, the director of academic planning at the university, said: "We are determined to deliver graduates with the skills to sustain local employers.

"This is an outstanding example of how business and education providers can and should work together."

ON COURSE: Kent Fire and Rescue Service is training employees in computers

Burning ambition for IT

A FIREFIGHTER is the first person to complete a special new course in IT.

John Wheeler, watch manager at Tunbridge Wells, started the course earlier this year.

Working both independently and with tutors he studied computer techniques including word processing, spreadsheets and presentations.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service, the Fire Brigades Union Lifelong Learning Fund and West Kent College organised the course.

A fund spokesman said: "Firefighters are increasingly affected by information technology and communication.

"KFRS has installed computers in every station for a number of purposes, for example administration, development and operational procedures.

"However, many employees within our organisation do not have the skills to perform these functions."

He said there is now a variety of funded courses so all KFRS staff can brush up on numeracy, literacy and computer skills.

Following several assessments, Mr Wheeler passed the course with flying colours.

He said: "I didn't have any formal qualifications, so feel very proud to gain my certificate."

Colleagues are also taking the course.

Sports studies to be headed by cycling star

A CYCLING supremo has become the University of Kent at Medway's first head of its Centre for Sports Studies.

For over a decade, Dr Louis Passfield has worked as a consultant in sports science and sports nutrition making him an ideal candidate for the exhausting position.

He has also coached Olympic, World and Commonwealth gold medal cyclists, and carried out consultancies for several professional cycling teams and riders.

As a member of British Cycling – the national governing body for cycle racing in Great Britain – he is also overseeing much of the preparation for both the Beijing Olympics next year, plus London's games.

The University's Centre for Sports Studies runs a range of degree programmes ranging from Sports Therapy, Health and Fitness to Sport and Exercise Management.

He said: "I hope to help establish Kent as a true centre for excellence in sports studies – where people want to learn from the best, and to be the best.

"The university is becoming well known not only for its portfolio of sports courses, but also for producing highly trained sports graduates with all the right skills to succeed in the workplace.

"My role is to continue this good work, to increase our research and expertise, and to develop our undergraduate and postgraduate teaching programmes."

The university has pledged £3 million in funding towards the creation of a regional centre of sporting excellence at Medway Park.

PUBLIC NOTICES

Contracts for Textile Collections and Processing from Household Waste Recycling Centres 2007-2009

Kent County Council is an Excellent Rated authority and has very high expectations of itself and its contractors. The contracts which are the subject of this expression of interest centre on the collection, onward transfer and processing of textiles which are deposited at Kent County Council Household Waste Recycling Centre sites. The contracts will be awarded for a period of two years with an expected start of December 2007.

These contracts are focused upon the collection of all textiles from our sites (no pre-sorting). The contracts will be area based packages (East and West Kent) but will also allow for a combined bid to be submitted for both areas. Kent County Council Waste Management is keen to harness innovation as a by product of the tender and this will give potential tenderers the opportunity to provide options within their response which should provide a cost effective solution for the residents of Kent.

We are seeking expressions of interest from suitably qualified and experienced contractors who are interested in working with Kent County Council to deliver this service. We will evaluate options for contract award on the basis of 1 or 2 or both packages per contractor.

The contract packages area splits are:

West Kent
- Maidstone, Swanley, Dartford, Gravesend, Tunbridge Wells, Sevenoaks and Sittingbourne

East Kent
- Faversham, Herne Bay, Sheerness, Ashford, Shorncliffe (Folkestone), Canterbury, Deal, Margate and Richborough

The contract packages collectively deal with approximately 1400 tonnes of textiles per annum with corresponding contract values. This is expected to increase as other contractual initiatives that are centred on the recently let Household Waste Recycling Centre management contracts deliver operationally.

Contract Duration is 2 Years to 2009
Tenders will be invited following completion of a pre-qualification process.
Contractors wishing to be considered for inclusion on the select tender list will need to apply in writing (contact details below) for a pre-qualification questionnaire application form, no later than 12 October 2007.
A maximum of 7 companies will then be invited to tender for the provision of the service during November 2007.

Axe wielded for 'Zoom' car

NOBODY can say Mazda does not live up to its 'Zoom Zoom' image.

Having reinvented itself since the launch of the Mazda6 in 2002, it has dumped the under-performing Mazda2 ahead of time.

The boxy supermini/MPV has been out of step with newer and sportier Mazdas as the brand pursues an ambition to be seen as Japan's answer to the Italian Alfa Romeo.

Just four years after launch it has been axed in favour of this smart new model with more coupe than supermini profile and charged with tripling the brand's sales into this sector.

It also announces Mazda's new 'lighten up' creed; it is 100kg lighter than its predecessor, cutting fuel consumption by up to 15 per cent and delivering greater agility.

Three petrol engines and three equipment levels (TS, TS2 and Sport) are offered, priced from £8,499.

Fancy footwork for Focus

SHIFTING its all-new Mondeo upmarket now calls for fancy footwork from Ford for the best-selling Focus

So, having been criticised for the car's unambitious design when launched in 2004, Britain's favourite car has had a major makeover using the 'kinetic' approach that inspired the Mondeo.

But Ford has also upgraded the interior and promises innovations such as slick double-clutch VW/Audi style auto transmission and an ultra-green 'ECOnetic' version.

A Jaguar that really does roar

JUST as things seem to be coming together at Jaguar, Ford has put the famous yet troubled British marque up for sale.

The cause for optimism is the X-F, due next March. It is a radical break from the 'heritage' styling of recent Jags and a fitting replacement for that epitome of retro style, the S-Type.

The reborn 'S' is a fine looking car, drives and rides well and has a superb twin turbodiesel option, but simply does not appeal to the executive market vital to the success of Jaguar.

The X-F is a powerful riposte to traditionalists that says: "We now know that retro isn't the future, so now we're doing it our way."

Priced from £33,900, it will attack the Audi A6, BMW 5-Series and Mercedes E-Class, but the X-F profile is more like the eye-catching Mercedes CLS – effectively a four-door E-Class coupe and starting at ten grand more than the Jag.

Peugeot launches a new revolution

PEUGEOT has launched a French revolution with its new 308 Ford Focus challenger.

Basking in the success of the new 207 supermini launched earlier this year, Peugeot wants the 308 to launch a new era and '8' series of models in which its cars are seen to offer greater quality and design.

It admits that the newcomer carries over elements of its 307 predecessor, a car that lost ground in later years of production, but says it differs hugely in terms of packaging and sits upmarket from value-for-money Far East challengers.

It is a line taken by Ford with the all-new Mondeo and Peugeot's execution is no less impressive; though only fractionally lower than the 307, the wider track and sculpted styling make the 308 appear to crouch much more, helped by a front end more leonine than any previous Peugeot.

The marque's lion badge sits like a nostril within a 'nose' jutting from the bonnet over a gaping jaw and flanked by cat-like eyes, while two wide-set foglights accentuate that crouch.

But if we will soon become familiar with the exterior, it may take longer to get used to the interior; whether or not fitted with the excellent panoramic glass roof available on the car, the cabin seems huge for this class of car.

The impression is largely due to the way the dashboard and facia has been pushed well forward and to a downward swooping centre console.

The materials are much better than before and Peugeot admits that it took a good look at the way Audi does things – the German executive marque is widely regarded as the interior fit, finish and design benchmark.

The materials and controls are pleasing to touch and use, the clocks and gauges belong to a class above, while seating and passenger comfort really delivers to a high standard.

Clever stowage such as the 'organiser' detailing of the glove compartment door and the lidded rear parcel shelf, add to the good impression.

The car also drives and handles far better than the outgoing 307, soaking up surface imperfections in the Gallic tradition while delivering good grip and stability when cornering.

Having set such new high standards in all other departments, I was then surprised by how much the engine line-up is allowed to intrude upon the cultured interior, but petrol and diesel options alike are state of the art and there is a strong green message – lower emissions and consumption and the promise of a diesel-electric hybrid option by 2010 at least.

Michelin has also developed a new 'Energy Saver' tyre especially for the 308, to reduce rolling resistance by 20 per cent for improved fuel economy.

The 308 five-door hatchback is out now – a three-door follows in December.

Volvo surprise has

ON the face of it, there is not much about Volvo's XC90 to remind you of England's fleet-footed Rugby World Cup wing Jason Robinson.

But the body swerve thrown in 2002 by this large yet elegant seven-seat SUV (sports utility vehicle) was straight from the 'Billy Whizz' locker.

German rivals looked on as defending teams do after a power-packed Robinson try and thought: "How did that happen?"

It happened because 'little' Volvo took a long hard look at the emerging SUV market and avoided the over-bearing macho look of the original BMW X5, went for a classier and better made interior than the first Mercedes M-Class, worked on the practicalities and made every XC90 a seven-seat MPV as standard too.

Volvo had also worked out that the ladies have a big say in buying cars like this and usually end up being the main driver, so a female focus group worked with the Swedish marque to fine tune the details.

We can probably thank them for the extra pair of small seats that fold away easily beneath the rear load floor and it was they who insisted, apparently, on the split tailgate that doubles as a grandstand and makes loading easier; it will have driven up XC90 costs, but is a feature many rivals have emulated.

The newcomer also had Volvo's excellent five-cylinder D5 turbodiesel – at the time, it was near untouchable for refinement, low-down punch and economy in this class.

Despite the bulk that goes with seven seats – even if the rear pair is really only for kids – the XC90 was surprisingly light on its feet on-road and pretty capable off-road too.

When it arrived, dealers greeted it as manna from heaven at a time when they had been starved of new product. They just could not get enough XC90s and needed to stifle a giggle if asked for a discount – the car was probably under-priced anyway.

But time marches on and the opposition has struck back: Land Rover has the award-winning Discovery 3, BMW and Mercedes have much improved X5 and M-Class replacements – the latter even makes a stretched seven-seat GL version and the six-seat R-Class 4x4 MPV – and Audi's much delayed entry into the sector has produced the impressive Q7.

There are also classy cut-price options such as the Hyundai Santa Fe.

So, has the XC90 been outclassed? In some areas yes, but the car has matured well.

The styling remains fresh and the car feels as robust and well thought out as before, even if interior details could do with livening up.

Ride and handling is right on the money and the totally flat load floor and easy management of the five rear chairs is still one of the best.

And, for the keener driver, Volvo has countered the arrival of the latest X5 and the Q7 by creating a proper (SE) Sport option as tested here in diesel form.

the magic touch

absorbers, other chassis tweaks and a sportier steering set-up complete with sports steering wheel, Volvo has created a car than can tackle the twists and turns in style without much compromising of the XC90's inherent tried and trusted balance of ride and handling.

Our car's Geartronic auto 'box is also worth the extra £1,350 as it delivers seamless auto shifting in traffic and slick manual selection when pressing on.

In typically restrained Volvo style, it also makes the point visually with 19-inch alloys, chrome exhausts, wheel arch extenders, satin silver details, superb sports seats and deleted roof rails to lower the car visually – rails can still be specified though at no extra cost.

Now that is more like Billy Whizz.

Angling champ lands new Vauxhall

VAUXHALL dealership FG Barnes has highlighted the arrival of the brand's new Antara 4x4 by supplying one to a sportswoman who sometimes needs to get to awkward locations.

Mary Hopper – a regular with the England Ladies' fly fishing team – will use the £22,000 vehicle for championships up and down the country over the next year and in her role with Casting for Recovery, a new UK charity that seeks to use fly fishing to aid post-operative mental and physical rehabilitation of breast cancer sufferers .

Mary, also national sales director for Kosmedia – publisher of Kent on Sunday, and new Your-series of local newspapers and YourKent TV broadcaster – said:

"This is a great gesture by FG Barnes, both for fly fishing in this country and a charity that I am passionate about – we are holding our first 'retreat' session for breast cancer patients later this month."

Martin Lewis, general manager of the dealership at Park Wood, Maidstone, and pictured here handing over the Antara's keys said: "We are delighted to support Mary's angling and charity work and also raise the profile of a well-made quality product that marks the return of Vauxhall to the 4x4/SUV market after a few years' absence."

Mary, who lives near Whitstable, added: "The Antara will be fantastic for getting to some of the difficult locations that go with the sport.

"I got the fishing bug as a kid catching sticklebacks in the local stream, but didn't take up fly fishing until 15 years ago. I was then introduced to the England ladies' team by Charles Jardine – one of the world's best fly fishermen – then living at Whitstable.

I honestly didn't think I was good enough, but I came second in my first tournament and have since represented England at nine national championships and three European.

"I guess I'm really hooked now."

Duo to strengthen bank's SME sector

TWO more partners have been taken on by Clydesdale Bank's Financial Solutions Centre in Tunbridge Wells.

The decision was made to take on Julie Wallace and Mark Parkin to cope with the growing customer portfolio in the small and medium enterprise sector.

The bank said the new duo bring with them a wealth of experience to compliment the 11-strong team of partners and associates.

Growth spurt

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

BUSINESS in the South East is growing at the fastest rate in a decade, according to a new survey.

The good news comes in the latest PMI Business Survey Data, produced for The Royal Bank of Scotland.

Ross Walker, UK economist at the bank said: "The report showed the South East private sector economy grew at the fastest pace since May 1997.

"Companies across the region continue to benefit from buoyant levels of incoming new business and job creation is running at a robust clip.

"A further positive development for firms was an easing in cost inflation, alongside an increase in pricing power – though the Bank of England will be keeping an eye on any signs of emerging inflation pressures."

Higher output was supported by robust expansion in both new business and employment, while backlogs of work fell for a sixth successive month. Growth of output was also the fastest it has been in a decade.

Employment levels have been rising, with South East companies continuing to boost staffing levels, with the rate of hiring accelerated to a six-month high.

Frazer Thompson, chairman of the Kent branch of the Institute of Directors, said: "It's great news that business confidence is high in the UK and that the South East is still the engine room driving the economy forward.

"However, for this growth to continue we cannot just stand still and be pleased with what we have achieved so far.

"There must be changes and improvements to infrastructure to cope with new housing numbers planned for the region over the next 20 years or so.

"We also need the right people with the right type of skills and training to be available to employers. Long may this upward trend continue, but it will only do so if we plan for the future now."

Key to success

A FATHER and son have mixed and matched their talents to set up a new business.

Driving instructor Steve Peirson-Webber got the idea for the company after seeing a locksmith leave a mess behind while opening a front door at the theory test centre in Canterbury.

After returning from a year in Mexico his son, Tom, decided he wanted to run his own business – so the pair decided to go into partnership and PWPhoenix Locksmiths was born.

Steve, 51, said he thought the company would be a success because of the blend of his son's youthful enthusiasm and his experience in business development and marketing.

Tom, 21, a former Norton Knatchbull School pupil, said he brought creativity and enthusiasm to the partnership.

They have been trained and accredited by the UK Locksmith Association.

Tom said: "We're looking to provide a friendly, efficient and tidy service in the Ashford area and in addition to gaining access to properties in emergencies, we are also trained to install new locks and to give advice on other security aspects."

Steve said he plans to carry on part time with his driving instructor business, Phoenix Drive.

Save a bit now so you don't pay later

WE ALL know that starting the savings cycle early on in our working lives is a logical decision that will ultimately make a significant difference to the amount of money we end up with by the time we reach retirement.

However, the simple truth is that many people don't start thinking about their retirement until much later, when they have lost valuable years.

According to Government estimates, the gap between how much people are saving and how much they need to save to ensure a comfortable retirement is over £57 billion.

Around 13 million people – equivalent to nearly half the working population – are currently not saving enough for their retirement.

Under Government proposals, from 2012 every employee aged over 22 and earning more than £5,000 a year, who is not contributing to a pension, will be automatically enrolled in a personal account, to make sure they save something for retirement, although they have allowed get-out clauses for people who want to opt out.

All contributions to pensions, whether company or personal schemes, are tax-deductible.

By Liz Rule
Pharon Independent Financial Advisers Ltd
01227 787000

This means that a contribution of £1,000 will cost a basic rate taxpayer only £780, and a higher rate taxpayer £600. According to the Treasury, around £13bn a year is currently given away in tax relief and so it is crucial to get your share.

Even non-taxpayers can benefit from the current rules. It is possible to make contributions into a stakeholder pension on behalf of children and still receive tax relief.

In the current tax year, investing up to a net figure of £2,808 with the inclusion of tax relief equates to a total gross investment amount of £3,600.

There are not many opportunities in life where something benefits you and your family members and saves tax at the same time.

High street feels pinch of rising interest rates

THE Bank of England's recent interest rate increases could be starting to bite as high street spending rises slow.

According to the CBI in the South East, we are still seeing a growth in sales, but at a slower rate than before as the market cools slightly.

It is the slowest rate of increase since last November.

The Quarterly Distributive Trades Survey revealed 42 per cent of retailers said year-on-year sales volumes were up in August, while 26 per cent said they were down.

Malcolm Hyde, regional director the CBI in the South East, said: "The strong high street spending retailers enjoyed over the spring has passed, and they have experienced a steadier rate of sales over the past quarter.

"This more moderate growth is expected to continue, and retailers are less inclined to put up prices, which should help alleviate pressure to move interest rates up again.

"The Harry Potter effect seems to have helped lift sales for booksellers, but the damp and disappointing summer has not done clothes shops any favours."

He said the slower sales growth and an ease on increasing prices, suggest interest rate rises are working through to the high street.

Stress is worth it

INCREASED stress and longer working hours are not necessarily a bad thing, according to a poll of accountants.

A survey of more than 120 finance professionals by recruiter Elements found that although 72 per cent said their jobs had become more stressful, nearly half of those said this was not a negative issue.

More than 80 per cent also said they regularly work for more than 40 hours a week, but many claimed the extra rewards on offer made it worthwhile.

Mos aim for Spitfires

ICE HOCKEY: Invicta Dynamos take on Romford Spitfires this evening looking for their first win in the English National Ice Hockey League Cup.

The Mos were beaten 9-0 and 9-2 last weekend by Premier League side Slough Jets.

But coach Kevin Parrish is confident his side can bounce back against the Spitfires in their next game.

"Slough were a very a good side but we have taken the positives and worked hard this week in training," he said.

"We are looking forward to getting a good result and should beat them convincingly."

The teams face-off at the Gillingham Ice Bowl at 5.15pm.

Stones youth in cup win

FOOTBALL: Maidstone United and Ramsgate's Under-18 sides made it through to the next round of the FA Youth Cup with big wins this week.

Maidstone put six past Faversham without reply, while Ramsgate convincingly beat Rye United 5-2.

The Rams will face East Grinstead Town in the first qualifying round in the week commencing September 24.

Last season the Stones were knocked out on penalties and will be hoping for better luck when they face Bromley in the next round.

Sponsors for Crusade

BASKETBALL: Kent Crusaders have sealed two sponsorship deals for the new basketball season.

Body and Mind Leisure have signed on as the team's main sponsor for a second year, after supporting the team last season.

The agreement sees the team named as The Body and Mind Kent Crusaders, and the leisure centre will host all the home games and training sessions.

Head coach Mads Olesen said: "The financial support and facilities in this deal are an asset to the club and allow the team to be competitive at EBL division two level."

The club also agreed a deal with Regents Coaches, which will transport the team to all their away fixtures.

The Crusaders begin competitive matches on September 30, with a National Cup game at home against Southampton Trailblazers.

Next weekend the club host a pre-season tournament featuring the London Leopards from EBL Division One.

County avoid drop

Coach plays tribute to threadbare squad

By DAVID PRITCHARD

KENT unexpectedly guaranteed their County Championship Division One status with a game to spare this week thanks to a combination of results in their favour.

An injury-ravaged Kent thrashed title-chasing Hampshire by 10 wickets at The Rose Bowl while relegation rivals Warwickshire folded at Old Trafford against Lancashire.

It means that Kent's ever-present record in Division One is preserved ahead of the last game of the season. In a remarkable turn-around, a win against Durham at Canterbury this week could see Kent move above Surrey and into mid-table.

Kent coach Graham Ford said it had been a nervous time but paid tribute to the players, many of whom had played with injuries.

"I'm very relieved and extremely proud of the fight and commitment the guys have showed," he said.

Fantastic

"To go and win as convincingly as we did was fantastic. It's a bit of a war hospital in the changing room at the moment but nobody has complained – they have just done their job."

Of the significant injuries, Ryan McLaren played with a broken thumb, James Tredwell is in need of knee surgery and Darren Stevens has still not fully recovered from a groin injury he picked up last month.

Rob Key won the toss at The Rose Bowl and Kent made the most of it, racking up 495 with Martin van Jaarsveld top scoring with 112.

In reply, Hampshire were bowled out for 216 with the injured Tredwell taking 4-46. Kent enforced the follow-on and although the hosts put up a stronger fight in the second innings, they were bowled out for 282, leaving Kent a victory target of four runs.

Once again Tredwell returned the best figures, with 4-114, finishing with a match total of 8-160.

DESERVED: Graham Ford said it would have been an injustice if Kent had faced relegation after thrashing Shane Warne's Hampshire at the Rose Bowl

It took just three balls for Joe Denly to score the winning runs, which sealed Kent's first County Championship win since early June.

Ford said: "It is a special feeling. Avoiding relegation is not what you really play for but it feels good. We felt if we had gone down it would have taken some of the gloss off the Twenty20 win, but now I feel like it has been a successful season."

Kent feel justice has been done after they outplayed Warwickshire in both games this season, only for the weather to intervene.

Last month rain washed out the first two days of the game at Edgbaston. When play did get underway Kent were much the better side, but the lost time ruined any chance of a result.

In even more exasperating circumstances at the St Lawrence Ground in July, the weather denied Kent a certain victory.

After dominating for three and a half days, the home side were three wickets from a priceless win when the final 70 overs were lost to the rain.

Kent also believe they were unfortunate to receive just four points from an abandoned game against Worcestershire, which would have left a bitter taste had the county been relegated.

"I think we felt pretty hard done by as far as Championship cricket is concerned," said Ford.

"It would have hurt really badly if we had gone down because of those issues, but now we can just go out and enjoy the final game of the season."

The match against Durham at the St Lawrence Ground begins on Wednesday.

Pard's delight at injury-free Addicks

AS CHARLTON Athletic embarked on a run of seven games in 22 days yesterday, there was good news for manager Alan Pardew as he observed a completely empty treatment room, writes Matt Wright.

Matt Holland, Yassin Moutaouakil, Ben Thatcher and Osei Sankofa all resumed training during the international break, while £2.5m summer signing Luke Varney and United States international Cory Gibbs both returned to match action.

The news led Pardew to declare he expected to be in the top four by the end of a week that features home games against Norwich City and Leicester City.

"From what I have seen in training, I believe we have a very good chance of promotion," he said.

"Injuries will play a key role for us, as they will for every side, but on Thursday we didn't have a single player in the treatment room, so that is fantastic news."

Pardew's good mood may also have related to the comeback of striker Varney, who hit a hat-trick in an incredible reserve match on Monday night.

The Addicks second XI beat Southampton 8-4 in a game that also featured three penalties, a red card and numerous near misses.

BACK IN TRAINING: Matt Holland

But it may not be easy for Varney to force his way into Pardew's starting XI. Chris Iwelumo and Svetoslav Todorov have forged a decent partnership, while Izale McLeod has shown plenty of raw promise.

"Luke's return to the squad means we have four mainline strikers now, and they're all very competitive," said the manager.

"There's not much to choose between them, so they have to play at an extra-special level if they are going to stay in the team.

"Those four players have real competition to get hold of the two shirts up front, and sometimes there will only be one place up for grabs."

Pardew, who will pit his wits against his former assistant at Upton Park, current Norwich manager Peter Grant, on Tuesday night, will be hoping for a maximum return of six points from Charlton's next two fixtures.

And that should position the Addicks nicely during what Pardew believes is the difficult half of the Championship season.

"It's always hard to get going in the first half of the season in this division," he said.

"It's about getting the team to gel, ignoring the interruptions, picking up as many points as possible and getting into a decent position.

"Then, come Christmas, you have to be in the top few places and ready to really go for it until the end."

Tredding up to a whole new level

In his first column for Kent on Sunday, Kent star James Tredwell talks about enjoying the most fruitful season of his career, the fight to avoid relegation and trying to break into the England squad

THIS summer has been the most enjoyable season in my professional career and I'm delighted to have topped it off by helping Kent to avoid relegation in the Championship. To get an England Lions call-up this coming winter would be perfect.

I represented England A on tour in India during the winter of 2003-04, and actually ended up captaining the team because of injuries, but I really feel now is the time for me to challenge for senior international honours.

A few people have talked about me as a potential one-day international player, and it's nice to hear Rob Key, our captain, saying he regards me as the best English one-day spinner in the country.

But it is in first-class cricket that I feel I've made the biggest strides this past summer, and perhaps for the first time in my career I know that I can be a match-winner for Kent in the Championship.

I'm 25, and I know spinners mature later than most cricketers, but the breakthrough for me came during one of the last matches of last season – against Sussex at Canterbury – where I took 6 for 81 in their second innings and 10 wickets in the match for the first time.

That was the game which put me in great heart for this summer, and due to Min Patel's unfortunate long-term injury problems I've found myself to be a regular member of the Championship side as well as the one-day team.

In past seasons I've come to expect a place in Kent's one-day side, but my opportunities in first-class cricket have been patchy and I was dying for a chance to have a run in the Championship team. Confidence-wise, as well as gaining rhythm and added experience from being able to play so regularly, it's been great for me.

I know I've a way to go yet in my career, but before we started our last two matches of this season against Hampshire and Durham only Ryan McLaren and Yasir Arafat had taken more Championship wickets than me. I had 25 at that stage, and have now got to 33 after picking up eight wickets in our vital victory at Hampshire.

Overall, however, it is not just my bowling that counts. In the past, whenever anyone asked me what I did, I would have described myself as a bowler who batted, but now I would definitely say I'm an all-rounder.

Scoring my maiden first-class century against Yorkshire at Tunbridge Wells earlier this season was a great thrill and it's been nice that Rob and the management have promoted me up the order a few times. I've opened and batted at four, and my batting is also an area of my game that I'm aiming to improve.

I want to be regarded as a fully fledged all-rounder – which, in effect, means someone who bats regularly in the top six or seven and is a front-line bowler. There aren't too many of those kind of cricketers in the first-class game, but I feel I can be one of them.

It's funny how your game develops because when I started out for Folkestone Under 11s I was always down at number 11. But, by the time I was 13, I had worked my way up the order and in Kent age-group teams from about that time I started to open the batting.

I remember that Alex Loudon was the captain when I first got selected for Kent U11s as a spinner, and some well-known Kent League cricketers who I played alongside as I went up the Kent age group ladder include James Lincoln and Lewis Jenkins of St Lawrence, who have just won the Kent League this summer, and Mark Calman of Blackheath.

When I broke into the Kent second XI it was also as an opening batsman who bowled off-spin, so I suppose I've got the background to become an all-rounder at senior county level at least.

The first priority, however, was to preserve our first division status in the Championship and everyone in the Kent dressing room was trying their hardest over recent weeks to make sure we did.

It would have been a travesty if we had gone down, because we are definitely not one of the two worst sides in the division, but it's the points on the board that matter and we made sure we got enough to stay up.

Champion £1m payout

CRICKET: Kent will have a million extra reasons to defend their Twenty20 Cup title next season, after the England and Wales Cricket Board announced the creation of a T20 Champions League this week.

Scheduled to be held in October 2008, the inaugural competition will feature the two domestic finalists from England and Wales against teams from Australia, South Africa and India.

The lucrative tournament has a prize fund of £2.5million, with £1m going to the winners.

David Collier, ECB chief executive, said the new tournament was an exciting prospect.

"It will provide teams with the opportunity to earn the title of the World Club Champions in a format which will be eagerly anticipated by spectators and players alike."

Players on the mend

FOOTBALL: Ebbsfleet midfielder Neil Barrett could be back in full training this week after recovering from an ankle ligament injury.

New signing Barrett was injured in Fleet's second game of the season a 2-1 defeat to Salisbury City.

Fleet boss Liam Daish (pictured) said: "It makes me feel a lot happier to have players coming back. The injuries have hurt us but we are just focused on getting the players fit."

Also on the road to recovery are Mark Ricketts (knee) and James Smith (double hernia operation). Smith begins a six-week rehabilitation programme this week.

New pitches for Gate

FOOTBALL: Margate football club began the latest stage of their redevelopment by breaking ground on the club's 5-a-side Centre this week.

Up to eight artificial pitches are planned for the centre, which will be built on land to the north of the Hartsdown Park stadium.

It has taken years of planning and delays to reach this stage, but the club are relieved to finally get building work underway.

VACANCY: New Gills boss is still to be named

WHO'S NEXT?

Gills chief Scally biding his time in search for Jepson replacement

By DAVID PRITCHARD

A WEEK on from Ronnie Jepson's resignation, fans are waiting expectantly to find out the identity of his full-time replacement.

Chairman Paul Scally put assistant manager Mick Docherty and first-team coach Iffy Onoura in temporary charge of the team for yesterday's game against Brighton.

When asked about who would succeed Jepson earlier in the week, Scally gave little away.

"I've got a very open mind at this moment in time," he said.

"I shall listen to those that want to come to the club, look at those that we would perhaps like to talk to as well and then make a decision – I think everyone has got a chance."

Results

In the interim period, Docherty and Onoura are in the best position to stake a claim for the job. If they can get an improvement in performances and results it is possible they could be given the position permanently – something Docherty says would be tempting.

"It is something certainly that Iffy and I would consider, but it is too early to even look at that," said Docherty.

"All we are doing is getting our heads down and doing the job professionally and to the best of our ability.

"The chairman, I'm sure, will have a lot of candidates who are looking to come into the club and he has to decide which way he wants to go. But in the meantime Iffy and I will do the job as we see fit.

OPEN MINDED: Paul Scally has given little indication as to who will be the new manager at Priestfield Pictures: KEITH SLATER

"It's a terrific club, there's no doubt about that. I have been in the game a long, long time and this is as good a club as I have worked with and for."

An internal appointment would have its advantages. The pair already know the players and the staff, and from a financial point of view would be much cheaper than bringing in someone new.

They also appear to have the backing of the players. Mark Bentley, who signed a new contract last week, said the players felt responsible for Jepson's departure and were working hard to improve results.

"We have got a lot of respect for Doc and Iffy and we want to do it for them now," he said. "They are good coaches who are fighting for their jobs now and we certainly don't want to see another two members of the staff leaving," he said.

While the duo have several things going for them, there are factors that count in their favour, one being that working as part of Jepson's staff they are to a certain extent tainted by the previous regime.

Critics would also argue that if they could have improved results they would have done so already, and that the club needs a clean break under a new boss.

Also, managerial partnerships in football are almost always doomed to failure eventually. While Docherty and Onoura are likely to work well together in the short term, history has shown it is a difficult relationship to sustain.

Finally, while Docherty and Onoura are popular with the fans, to many they represent the unfashionable option. Bringing in a completely new person with different ideas is a seductive alternative for many.

As with any vacancy, managers were instantly linked to the Priestfield job, with names such as Micky Adams and Martin Allen touted as potential replacements.

Results

Alan Liptrott, Gills fan and joint publisher of fansite gillsconnect.com, would like to see former Gills player Adams get the job.

"He has played and managed at the highest level and if I could pick someone to come in then it would be him. I have known him for 25 years and if he did manage the Gills then I would be pleased as punch," he said.

Adams made 85 appearances for Gillingham at the start of his career before leaving for Coventry City in 1983.

He went on to manage a variety of clubs, including Brighton and Leicester City. In January he was sacked from his last post at Coventry, and is now assistant manager at Colchester United.

So far there has been no indication that Adams would be interested in taking the job, or if the club would be able to meet his contract demands if he was.

According to Liptrott, a key factor for whoever gets the job will be their contacts.

He said: "Whatever manager they get will need to bring in five or six quality players on loan. Someone like Martin Allen or Micky Adams will demand it – I can't believe that they would take over without assurances.

"The team are just not good enough and at the end of the day, Ronnie didn't have an awful lot of options. With the current squad we need some sort of magician."

CARETAKERS: While respected by fans, Mick Docherty (standing) and Iffy Onoura (to his left) are considered an unfashionable option as a Priestfield managerial team
